National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
June 28, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER REVIEW - week ending June 28. TOTAL RECEIPTS: TOTAL: 260,000, last week 274,800, last year N/A. Auctions: 203,500, last week 195,600, last year N/A. Direct: 56,500 , last week 70,900 , last year N/A. Video/Internet: None, last week 8,300. This week's reported auction volume included 46% over 600 lbs and 44% heifers.

Compared to last week; feeder and stocker cattle prices were steady to weak in most areas, except for the Southeastern region which traded steady to 2.00 lower. Demand was moderate, at best, on lighter receipts as trading activity slowed-down and fell into a pre-holiday slump. Most auction markets will be closed next week for the 4th of July and country trading is sure to be very limited.

In just a few days, the cattle marketing atmosphere has changed from a flaming

Report Supplied By USDA

Trade sentiment was about steady to barely steady. Retail demand was mixed, but overall no better than moderate with features. Availability of all parts was at least adequate or obtainable. In production areas, live supplies were moderate. Weights were in a full range, but mostly desirable.

The 12-City Weighted Average Price for 07/01/02 was 57.38, compared to 58.37 last week, and 60.12 a year ago.

Young Turkey Parts And Bulk Meat

Des Moines, Iowa
July 2, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL YOUNG TURKEY PARTS AND BULK MEAT, Frozen, unless specified, cents per lb, delivered first receivers, part and full trucklots, as of July 2, 2002.

The market continued seasonally slow on commodity items. Inquiry was light at best on bulk white meat items for various holiday processing schedule fill-in needs. Some further processors were noting increased deli and cooked movement as a partial response to the recent warmer weather in parts of the country and the upcoming holiday. Some processors were also starting to indicate some minor ramifications caused by the recent heat wave on the live side. The export market continued slow as the industry continued to watch for developments in Russia and Asia.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JULY 8–14, 2002

NEW MOON, JULY 10

CHECK IT OUT!

The last Checker Cab was produced on July 12, 1982 The Checker Cab Manufacturing Company, based in Kalamazoo, Michigan, was founded in 1922 by Morris Markin The company found its biggest success in New York City, where the last of the fleet was finally put to rest in July 1999 Besides their easy-to-hail bright yellow-and-black-checkered design, the cabs were known for their boxy shape, unusually capacious trunks, and sturdy construction Not surprisingly, more than a few continue to be lovingly maintained by car aficionados and collectors alike

Too bad the only people who know how to run the country are busy driving cabs and cutting hair. --George Burns American comedian (1896–1996)

TIP OF THE WEEK

No cabs in sight? Use your cell phone to hail one.

OPINION

Historic Holstein Convention

Last week we had the splendid chance to attend and cover the National Holstein Convention in Atlantic City. What a place!

More importantly, we had the chance to see something historical happen.

In a big development, the Holstein Association U.S.A. voted 93-44 to provide power to the board.

That gave the board the right to make business decisions, such as setting registration, transfer, and other fees, rather than the delegates themselves, who controlled such things in the past.

The board of directors assume this power from the delegates.

During policy negotiations at the delegates' meeting near the end of the week, the observation was made by some that the association was tired of the "rubber stamp" approach of the past.

Some executive posts of the association — and this could apply to many agricultural trade and commodity associations as well — have been entrenched so long they have the power over what the board wants. Executive officers stay while many board members come and go.

So this could be a way to further balance the power, offering a great "checks and balances" system, to allow an association to operate in a stronger capacity. But the states, recognizing this kind of huge precedent, continue to operate under their own set of governance and regulations.

Maybe it's time to change that.

We believe the association's decision was a correct and daring approach, one that will benefit everyone over the long term. We congratulate their foresight in this matter and are willing to work, along with them, to provide better news and information about news as its made available to us.

Now Is The Time

To Control Potato Leafhopper Infestations In Alfalfa

Paul Craig, capitol region agronomy agent, reports the potato leafhopper (PLH) started arriving especially early this spring. Scouts found adults in the first cutting in early May. However, the colder-than-normal weather in late May appeared to significantly slow down the development of the leafhopper population.

Following first cutting, the insect was increasing in population levels, but most producers decided to harvest instead of applying control materials to second cutting. Some second cutting fields that were harvested last showed slight discoloration because of PLH feeding.

All indications are that there will be heavy pressure on the third cutting from PLH. Regrowth has been slowed because of moisture stress across the region, and high populations of adults will quickly increase populations of the feeding nymphs and adults. The hot temperatures we have experienced recently greatly favor development of this pest, which is the number 1 pest of alfalfa across the U.S.

Research has shown that feeding of alfalfa by PLH will affect forage quality, forage production (tonnage), stand longevity, and forage production next season as well. Alfalfa varieties sold as potato leafhopper resistant or tolerant are not the sole answer. Benefits of these varieties have been found to increase as the stand increases in age. First season growth of these varieties will still suffer loss from potato leafhopper, especially when populations are exceptionally high.

Growers should strive to carefully manage new seedings of alfalfa to reduce injury from potato leafhopper. Until a new seedling is one year old, it is still in the "development" stage and can be affected by insects that affect stand life and production.

Scouting of potato leafhopper is an easy and reliable way to prevent serious injury. To protect your alfalfa crop from damage, monitor the situation in your fields. Waiting until yellowing or "hopper burn" is evident is too late. Damage will have already occurred.

In a square-shaped field, monitoring in a "U" shaped pattern and, in a rectangular field, an "I" shaped pattern is best. In each field select five sample sites along the "U" or "I" shape. Use an insect net with a 15-inch diameter hoop and a tightly knit bag such as muslin. Within each of the five sample sites, make 20 sweeps with the net while walking in a zigzag pattern. Don't stop swinging the net until each of the 20 sweeps are completed. Sweep the net about 3-4 inches below the tops of the plants.

After completing the 20 sweeps in the first site, continue to swing the net back and forth a few times to force the insects into the small end of the bag. Grab the net quickly about 10 inches from the small end to trap the insects in a rather small area.

The difficult part is identifying and counting the potato leafhoppers. Count all the pale green adults (disregard any brown ones) and the nymphs. Slowly open the net and be alert for adults that can leave the net quickly without being noticed. After counting is completed, make note of the total. Then repeat this procedure at the next four sites. This will complete 100 sweeps.

Now calculate the number of leafhoppers per 10 sweeps. For example if you collected a total of 60 leafhoppers in 100 sweeps, divide 60 by 10 for an average of 6 leafhoppers per 10 sweeps. If threshold levels are low, repeat sampling on a weekly basis. Adults can fly and will move into new growth from surrounding areas.

To Determine Economic Injury Threshold For Your Alfalfa Field

A number of factors need to be considered when determining if spraying to control the leafhopper population is justified. The first factor is the number of leafhoppers present in the field. The second factor is the development of the plants.

A relatively low number of leafhoppers can inflict a serious amount of damage if they are present when the plants are small. Greatest losses to the alfalfa crop from leafhopper feeding occur before the plants reach six inches in height. Plants 12 inches and taller can tolerate leafhopper feeding without high losses.

A third factor to consider is whether you have a potato leafhopper-resistant variety.

A publication entitled "A Pest Management Program for Alfalfa In Pennsylvania" is available from your county extension office. Consult the charts in this publication for additional assistance in determining the economic threshold for your alfalfa crop.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

LORD OF THE SEVEN WONDERS

Background Scripture:
Psalms 65; 104.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 65.

A psychiatrist prescribed a visit to Niagara Falls to a patient because, he said, she needed to take a long, hard look at something bigger than herself. Perhaps many of us fail to "get anything out of" worship because we do not make it an opportunity to focus on something greater than ourselves. Concentrating all our attention upon ourselves is a very limiting perspective. But whenever we look beyond the horizon of self, we can be swept up and beyond.

Psalm 104 focuses upon the Lord, who is the creator of everything. It inspired Robert Grant's great hymn, "O Worship The King." To me, the psalm is equally suggestive of 'How Great Thou Art," also a celebration of God the creator. This psalm was probably sung during the annual New Year festival when the drama of creation was memorialized.

Prof. Samuel Terrien calls the God of Psalm 104 "The Lord of Seven Wonders." He says this psalm is singular in that "the whole universe is encompassed within a single sweep of religious vision." The psalmist opens with a sweeping pronouncement: "Bless the Lord, O my soul! O Lord my God, thou art very great!" (104:1)

The Wonder Of Light

He then begins with the first wonder (vs. 2-4), light, praising the Lord "... who coverest thyself with light as a garment" (v. 2). The psalmist saw the Lord as clothed in unearthly primeval light. According to him, it is not by darkness, but by an impenetrable light that God is concealed from us, just as 1 Timothy 6:36 says that the Lord "dwells in light unapproachable."

Prof. John Knox says this means that "while men can apprehend some things about God, his complete nature and being are concealed from them." That also is a wonder which should blow our minds beyond the limitations of self.

The second wonder (vs. 5-9) is the earth: "Thou didst set the earth in its foundation, so that it should never be shaken." The use of a participle form in the verbs indicates that the psalmist sees creation, not just as a cosmic event in the distant past, but as a continuing wonder. The Lord not only was the Creator, but still is creating today.

The third wonder is water (vs. 10-13): "Thou makest springs gush forth in the valleys." Wonder number four (vs. 14-18) is vegetation: " 'Thou dost cause the grass to grow for the cattle, and plants for man to cultivate." The moon and the sun (vs. 19-23) are the fifth wonder: "Thou hast made the moon to mark the seasons; the sun knows its time for setting." The sea is wonder number six (vs. 24-26): "Yonder is the sea, great and wide, which teems with things innumerable."

The Greatest Wonder

The crowning wonder, number seven (vs. 27-30), is the gift of life: "When thou givest to them, they gather it up... when thou takest away their breath, they die and they return to their dust." Without God there is no life, but God gives life to his creation and is ever renewing it. Life does not belong to humans, animals, or any other living form; it belongs to God. At birth, he gives it as a gift; at death, he takes it back.

The key to the last section of the psalm is verse 34: "May my meditation be pleasing to him, for I rejoice in the Lord." All the wonders he has enumerated and over which he has exulted are the end result of his meditation. He has pondered deeply and long and this has inspired him to rejoice in God's wonders.

"There would be more inspired poetry, better hymns, and more powerful preaching," says Prof. Knox, "if there were more meditation." Worship would be more uplifting and prayer and praise would be more natural.

Meditating on the wonders of God can be so beneficial to us. It is we who are blessed when we say or sing: "Bless the Lord, O my soul! Praise the Lord!"

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
June 28, 2002
Retail Dairy Prices Rising

- Ice cream more expensive than in 2001.
- Cheese remains below support levels.
- Demand is sluggish.

Cheese prices remain below support levels this week, whereas butter prices are up 4 cents per pound.

USDA reported that cheese offerings continue to exceed demand. That means we are still manufacturing more cheese than we are selling, so prices remain depressed. At the Chicago Mercantile Exchange this week, block cheese prices fell from $1.10 per pound on Monday, June 24 to $1.0850 per pound the next day, and remained at that level the rest of the week. Barrel cheese prices fluctuated between $1.0725 and $1.0750 per pound.

Grade AA butter prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange actually rose this week, from $1.0325 per pound on Monday to $1.0575 by week's end. Despite strong inventory levels, butter prices perked up this week because of hot and humid conditions throughout the country. Cows produce less milk and butterfat under these conditions.

USDA reported that butter imports January-May of this year were well below year-ago levels. Imports within U.S. quota levels were down 31 percent relative to a year ago, and over-quota butter imports (called high-tier imports) were down 67 percent. Why go through the trouble of importing butter and paying all those tariffs when you can find it cheaper here?

Consumers are not very excited about dairy products so far this year. During the period February through April of this year, consumption of most dairy products was well below the same period a year ago. The change in consumption was as follows: 1.1 percent for butter, -0.1 percent for American cheese, 0.7 percent for Other cheese, -42.3 percent for nonfat dry milk, and 0.4 percent for fluid milk products. The drop in nonfat dry milk consumption is particularly alarming since imports of MPC for the first four months of this year were up 13.3 percent relative to a year ago.

So why aren't consumers eating as many dairy products this year as last year?

One reason may be because the U.S. economy is not doing very well. The stock market remains in a slump and announcements of massive layoffs continues. WorldCom, the country's second largest long-distance carrier, just announced they are planning on laying off 17,000 workers. Despite a rise of 6.1 percent in the growth of the U.S. economy the first quarter of this year (GDP), corporate profits have not been very optimistic. All of this does not look good for strong sales of dairy products.

Another reason for lackluster sales of dairy products, however, may be due to the fact that retail prices for cheese, butter, and ice cream have actually gone up this year despite a big drop in dairy ingredient costs.

Recall that last summer, ice cream makers were very unhappy with the dramatic rise in wholesale butter prices, which rose from $0.91 per pound in January 2000 to a peak of $2.09 per pound in August 2001. Higher butter prices translate directly into higher costs for cream, the major dairy ingredient used to make ice cream. Ice cream makers complained they could not pass along all of these higher ingredient costs to consumers else they would risk losing sales. After all, ice cream is an "impulse item." If it is too expensive, consumers will push their grocery carts right past the frozen dairy

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
July 2, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat bids were stronger again today after crop ratings were lowered for corn and beans. Winter wheat harvest is over 60 percent complete which is faster than last years progress. Export news that China cancelled a large booking of US hard red spring wheat overnight, limited gains in bids.

Corn and soybean bids fell sharply due to profit taking on the Board.

Improved chances of rainfall in this weeks forecasts and declines in crop ratings were pressure factors. Corn ratings dropped 4 percent for good to excellent while soybeans fell 6 percent. Traders, however, are cautious as this is a short week for trading and its still very dry most places. Lack of fresh export news also pulled corn and bean bids lower. Wheat mostly steady to 3 cents higher. Corn 3 to 5 cents lower except Minneapolis 2 cents higher. Sorghum 9 cents lower. Soybeans 4 to 10 cents lower.

roman candle into a dud. Last week, fat cattle prices continued their advance and feeder buyers were busy filling empty pens for an optimistic fall market. Several factors came together to extinguish the fireworks that some thought might carry us through the summer.

Last Friday's cattle-on-feed report seemed to start the downward slide, although numbers were 3 percent less than last year. This week, corn futures opened the week sharply higher on reports of scorching hot weather across the Midwest and that fear of higher feed costs pressured yearling prices. Beef sales slowed as we approach the holiday week and outlets have already stocked their inventories for the expected grilling demand. Also, cattle feeders were forced to take less money and orders for feedlot replacements were hard to come by.

Several areas continue to be extremely dry and now the near 100 degree temperatures have set-in to make conditions worse. Timing was less than ideal for Superior Video to conduct a four-day auction with over 150,000 head on offer.. Many of these cattle are for fall delivery and may set the tone for several months. Many producers in Colorado, Wyoming, and across South Dakota continue to have both their feeder cattle and replacements forced off pasture due to drought. The Independence Day celebrations in these areas won't include bottle rockets, but hopefully these folks can find other ways to display their patriotism. All of us here at USDA Livestock & Grain Market News wish all of you a Happy 4th of July (maybe just a little more special this year).

CATTLE: Compared to last weeks closing prices slaughter steers sold mostly steady to .50 lower. Trading opened mixed for the week with prices expressing some strength but as the 4th of July holiday came closer demand was light. Hot weather conditions during the week was no help at all for farmers trying to send cattle to local markets. Holstein steers traded steady to firm. Slaughter heifers have no comparison, but a higher undertone noted on a few sales of very attractive lots and singles. Feedlots mostly in the Northern Plains reported live cattle mostly steady at 63.00-63.50 and dressed sales were 2.00 lower mostly 99.00 as of Wednesday afternoon. Lean slaughter cows took a down fall 2.00-5.00 lower for the week as southern plants have a short week of slaughter. Breaker and Boner cows steady to 1.00 lower. Slaughter bulls were unevenly steady. Supply included 40 percent slaughter steers, 4 percent slaughter heifers, 42 percent cows, 5 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

Iowa Holstein Breeder Honored

LUANA, Iowa — Trent Henkes has been named Distinguished Young Breeder of the Year by the Holstein National Association.

Hankes manages a high-quality Holstein herd in Luana, Iowa, along with wife Leslie and children Leah, 12, and Matt, 10.

The family has bred two Excellent-94 cows, Henkeseen Mark Marci and her daughter, Henkeseen M Hillary-ET, and sent more than fifty young sires from this cow family to AI organizations around the world. Marci has also produced six excellent daughters, and Hillary has produced three excellent daughters to date.

"Registered Holsteins make up our entire livelihood," Henkes said. "Holsteins are our sole source of income which is generated by milk sales, but more importantly by the sale of breeding stock and embryos all over the world."

Joann Hartman, Holstein National Association president commended Henke.

"Trent Henkes represents our excellent young breeders who develop superior genetics. It's with overwhelming good feelings that the Association bestows this award to Trent," she said.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

All of that of course changed this year. Wholesale butter prices for the month of May averaged $1.06 per pound, a 43 percent drop from year-ago levels. Since most brands of ice cream typically average 10-18 percent butterfat, and since cream is priced in relation to butter, the cost of making ice cream should have declined this year. Taking it one step further, consumers should be facing lower retail prices for ice cream compared to last summer. But the data doesn't show that.

The Commerce Department reported that the U.S. city average price of a half-gallon of bulk ice cream rose from $3.75 last year during the peak selling period of June-August to $3.80 last month (May 2002).[1] But ice cream isn't the only dairy product that got more expensive this spring. Retail prices for cheddar cheese averaged $4.03 per pound in 2001 and rose to $4.20 by May. And remember butter? The retail price of salted Grade AA butter fell from an average $3.30 per pound in 2001 to $3.22 in May, despite a 36 percent reduction in wholesale prices.

It is a mystery why retail prices for these products are so high this spring. Lower milk prices, however, should translate into better bargains for consumers this summer. That should help move more product through retail channels and reduce mounting dairy inventories.

DO YOU HAVE THE CHARACTER TRAITS FOR A SUCCESSFUL FARM CAREER?

Know yourself. Getting into farming requires certain characteristics.

Not everyone is suited to be a farmer. Take some time to evaluate if you possess the following traits or personality qualities that have been correlated with the ability to succeed in an entrepreneurial business endeavor.

• Passion. I really enjoy talking and learning about farming. I am always looking for better ways to farm, and time passes quickly when I am involved in "doing" it.

• Persistence. I am willing to work 12- to 16-hour days, six days a week and on holidays to make my farm work. I stick with a job until it's done.

• Good health/energy. I have the physical and emotional stamina needed to handle the workload and strain that comes with farming.

• Creativity/innovation. I am receptive to changes and enjoy doing things differently. I like to approach problems differently.

• Independence/self-reliant. I like making my own decisions and getting things done on time. I am able to work on my own, but know when to seek help and am not too proud to seek it. I am self-disciplined and a self-starter.

• Intuition. My "gut' level decisions are usually good ones and I have no problem making them. I pay attention to what is going on and see patterns and trends beyond the obvious.

• Self-confidence. I have the courage and self-confidence to face risk, but the responsibility to minimize risky business decisions because I know how to provide leadership, keep my promises, and establish trust.

• Market awareness. I am open to new products and new ways of farming, always looking for ways to reinvent my business and myself. I pay attention to local, regional, and national farm events to keep in touch with changing ways of doing business.

• Lack of need for status. I am willing to lower my standard of living until my farm is established. I am also willing to forego a vacation, a new piece of equipment, or a new truck so that I can accomplish my goals in farming.

• Ability to accept challenges. I like a challenge and working hard on my project until I succeed. I can juggle many tasks and obligations at once while keeping site of the end goal. I can develop and organize a plan of action and follow through until it is completed.

• "Hard work" ethic. I am willing to put in the time and effort to make the farm succeed. My personal integrity is more important than my financial success.

If you could answer yes to most of these qualities, you have the traits of an entrepreneur. Only someone with well-developed entrepreneurial traits will answer yes to all of them.

If not, don't give up — these traits can be learned. Recognizing the personal qualities you need to be successful is the first step in this learning process. I hope that looking at your responses will help to stimulate your thoughts on how to enhance your entrepreneurial abilities and make your farm succeed.

Maximize Your Investments: Keeping The Cows You Buy Or Raise

Larry Hutchinson
Extension Veterinarian
Penn State

Many dairy producers buy cows or heifers to expand herd size or to maintain cow numbers. Nationally, about 44 percent of producers buy replacement animals each year.

A survey of farm biosecurity practices showed that among large herds in Pennsylvania, 70 percent had purchased animals in the past two years. About half of these Pennsylvania producers required some vaccinations for the new animals and very few of the producers buying replacements provided any time of separation or isolation of the new animals on arrival.

Replacement animals don't come cheap — current prices for bred heifers are at record highs, and new animals in the milking string, purchased or home-raised, don't start netting a profit until well along in their second lactation in the herd.

With the national average of only 50 percent of purchased cows remaining in the herd one year or more, many of these herd replacements aren't netting the purchaser any profit.

A first step and a cost-effective way to provide herd replacements for either maintaining or increasing herd size is to optimize your home-raised heifer rearing practices. Annual replacement rearing costs for a typical 100-cow herd average $32,000. By reducing calf/heifer mortality, increasing daily growth rates, and lowering the age at first calving, you can usually reduce cost per heifer raised and increase the number of heifers entering the milking herd.

Even with optimized heifer rearing, some herds find it necessary to buy replacement animals. Along with the herd additions you buy, you may acquire some things you don't want, such as BVD, Johnes, salmonella, contagious mastitis, and contagious hoof problems. All of these have been documented to enter herds through purchased cattle. So how do you minimize these risks?

Here are 10 top ways to keep the cows you buy. They may even help you keep the ones you raise.

1. Know the source. Single-source cattle are lower risk than multiple sources. Direct purchased cattle are lower risk than through a dealer. Know the health history of the source herd. This may require some testing of that herd.

2. Test before you purchase. You should test herd replacements for BVD-persistently infected animals, Johnes disease, and leukosis. If they're milking, test milk for contagious mastitis pathogens. Talk with your veterinarian about best testing options for various ages of cattle.

3. Vaccinate before purchase. Herd replacements should be fully protected using all the vaccines you're using in your herd.

4. Transport purchased cattle in clean, sanitized trucks with no access to other cattle.

5. Isolate purchased cattle on arrival. It's best to have separate air space, feeders, and waterers at some distance from resident cattle. This is difficult to do with lactating cows, but purchased cows can be milked last until you are sure of their contagious mastitis status.

6. After arrival, booster vaccinate purchased cattle with herd vaccines.

7. Protect your resident herd. Make sure they are up to date on all vaccines. Minimize cross-contamination between resident herd and new arrivals.

8. Provide best possible cow comfort, water access, and nutrition to recently purchased cattle.

9. Closely monitor purchased animals for appetite, fever, and signs of disease, especially lameness and pneumonia.

10. If disease problems occur, early and aggressive diagnostic and treatment procedures will be needed.

Those herd replacements are worth a lot. Plan ahead to ensure they'll be profitable and stay in your herd a long time.

About 1,000 Entries Listed In New Pennsylvania Farm Markets Consumer's Guide

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — To assist in the search for Pennsylvania's fruits and vegetables, Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced that the 2002 edition of "A Consumer's Guide to Pennsylvania Farm Markets" is available.

"Pennsylvania farm markets are a wonderful tradition in our great commonwealth," Hayes said. "They are part of the colorful patchwork of our communities, providing a gathering place for people to purchase farm-fresh products.

"This guide provides consumers with a listing, by county, of farmers markets and roadside stands across Pennsylvania. We encourage everyone to stop and purchase their favorite Pennsylvania produce from one of our many Pennsylvania farm markets."

Hayes said that "A Consumer's Guide to Pennsylvania Farm Markets" is provided as part of the "Pennsylvania Produce — Simply Delicious" program. Recently, Gov. Mark Schweiker kicked off the 2002 produce season by launching an expanded marketing campaign to promote the quality and wholesome goodness of "Simply Delicious" fruits and vegetables across the commonwealth.

Schweiker unveiled a new 30-second television ad promoting Pennsylvania produce as "Simply Delicious" through the eyes and words of an enthusiastic little boy enjoying local produce. The commercial is airing in central Pennsylvania, and will reach five media markets across the commonwealth by August. The ad will air more than 2,000 times this growing season.

To provide another reminder to consumers, 400 "Simply Delicious" billboards will be on display across Pennsylvania. Largely in part to the billboards and new television commercial, this year Pennsylvania will invest more than $1 million to promote the "Simply Delicious" program.

"We can all be Pennsylvania proud of the quality and bounty of the 'Simply Delicious' fruits and vegetables provided by the labor and dedication of Pennsylvania's growers," Hayes said.

Launched in 1998, the "Simply Delicious" promotion program continues to tell the good story about Pennsylvania produce, helping Pennsylvanians to find locally grown, farm-fresh products. More than 1,300 retail outlets and 650 growers are committed to this innovative marketing program, partnering to meet consumer demand and build on Pennsylvania No. 1 industry — agriculture.

Hayes noted that in the consumer's guide, each of the estimated 1,000 entries provides a listing of the dates, times, and location of each farm market.

To request a free copy of "A Consumer's Guide to Pennsylvania Farm Markets" or for more information on Pennsylvania farm markets or "Simply Delicious," contact the Department of Agriculture at (717) 787-6901, or one of its seven regional offices. The guide also is available on the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us, PA Keyword: "farm market guide."

NCGA Names Doggett To Public Policy Post

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association has named Jon Doggett as vice president of public policy. In this position, Doggett will be responsible for administration of trade, farm bill and legislative programs. He will be based in NCGA's Washington, D.C. office.

Doggett brings to NCGA a wealth of experience in government relations. Most recently, he was senior director of congressional affairs for the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF), where he managed regulatory and legislative projects, including energy, federal lands, land use, natural resources and climate issues.

"We're very excited to have Jon join the NCGA staff," said Rick Tolman, NCGA CEO. "He has a strong knowledge of the issues NCGA is committed to most notably renewable fuels, energy policy and farm policy. Together, his agricultural background and his strengths in grassroots advocacy are assets for this position. No doubt, the organization will benefit from Jon's strong professional working style; he is accomplished at getting things done."

In addition to his position at AFBF, Doggett was deputy director at the Public Lands Council, where he served as legislative director representing livestock producers grazing federal lands; and he served as senior legislative assistant for agriculture and business issues for Rep. Ron Marlenee (R-MT).

Doggett has a degree in finance and journalism from the University of Montana. He will join the organization July 15.

Lehmans Review 50-Year 'Evolution' In Chicken Business

When Duane was graduated from high school, he worked for his dad. They formed a partnership in 1979 on the original farm. Duane married Teresa in 1978, and he and his wife have three children. Teresa works as a nurse.

The poultry business prospered, but in 1983 avian influenza (A.I.) devastated area flocks.

Duane's flock was one of the first to be infected. Three-fourth of the flock died within a few days.

"We carried out dead chickens all day long," Duane said of what was one of lowest points in his farming career. Yet a bigger one was to follow.

Duane's flock was one of the first to be depopulated, according to government regulations.

Those were tough times, especially for the younger Lehmans. Biosecurity prevented their parents from setting foot on the property. Cleanup took months. Because Duane's chicken houses were the first to be depopulated, cleanup methods were not established. It seemed as if the younger couple worked endlessly trying to abide by changing regulations.

The weather was freezing, and the fear of the unknown future hovered over them. Did they want to risk putting in another flock?

Later, the government established an indemnity package to reimburse poultry farmers for their losses.

"Looking back, things didn't turn out as bad as we thought they could have," Duane said, "but we didn't know that then."

"We thank the Lord for seeing us through that," Teresa said.

Ironically, his father's flock, only a few miles away, remained free of A.I.

"What worked against some farmers worked to other's advantages," the elder Lehman said of the high egg prices during that time.

In 1986, Duane started working as an employee on his father's larger farm. Eventually they formed a partnership until Duane took over about four or five years ago.

During the 1993 harvesting season, Duane was working at the top of the silo when his leg caught in the silo unloader. His dad was working on the ground and immediately used his cell phone to dial 911.

Although emergency personnel were quick to respond, they could not determine how to lower Duane from the top of the silo. Additional help was called in, but none of the fire engine ladders were not tall enough to reach the top of the silo. Eventually, in a risky procedure, they used a rope to lower him 10 feet to the ladder.

The rescue required several hours. The wound was unclean and eight surgeries were required. Each time, more and more of his leg was removed due to expanding infection.

"We and so many people prayed fervantly," Teresa said. "We thank the Lord that Duane's leg was removed mid way between the ankle and the knee. It would have been much worse if it had needed to be amputated above the knee, like doctors had expected."

"I thought I never wanted to see a silo again, and I was certain I would never climb one," Duane said of his thoughts while laying in a hospital bed for three weeks.

But he did.

While still on crutches, before being fitted with a prosthesis, Duane painfully climbed the silo while his wife watched.

"I was mortified," Teresa said of the occasion.

During the next harvesting season, Duane was again at the top of the silo doing the same job. But it wasn't without some trepidation.

He said, "The sounds and smells brought back bad memories, but I did it."

As most farmers attest, unexpected things happen at any moment on the farm. And one of those happened the other year to Duane when several hundred cattle escaped from the farm. It took almost three months to recapture the cattle and required horseback riding and using a dart gun, and portable fence corrals.

When the cattle first escaped, Duane was sick with worry of damage to the golf course that edges their property or of causing road accidents. But as time wore on, Duane grew to enjoy the excitement of acting as "cowboy" rounding up cattle whenever phone calls revealed one's whereabouts. All but two were recaptured. One steer was shot by a teen-ager and another died.

Duane's mother can see the farm from her kitchen window and worries whenever she sees little black dots, which signals escaping cattle.

Duane's and Teresa's three children, Kristen, Jason, who are college students, and Travis, 16, are not interested in continuing the poultry operation.

Although Duane said he has good employees, he believes the size of the farm is better suited to a family operation.

"At one time, we were the biggest (producer) in the county. Today we are little guys with 130,000. Poultry farming is big business," Eldon said.

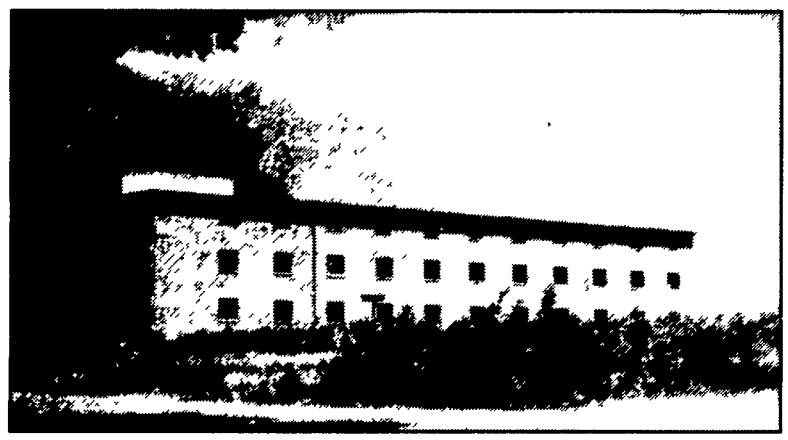
Eldon said economics have changed the industry dramatically.

"Our kids aren't interested in this financially risky business that is so demanding seven days a week, 24 hours a day," Duane said.

The Lehmans made the decision to sell the farm.

"We had a wake-up call when we put the farm for sale," Eldon said. "We discovered everyone wants contracts. It's difficult to attract new producers because everyone wants contracts."

The Lehmans refer to the changes they have observed since the 1950s as the "evolution of chicken operation." Standing at their Gretna View Farms sign are Eldon and Anna Mary Lehman and their son Duane and his wife Teresa Lehman.



When the Lehmans built this three-story chicken house in 1954, it was one of the most modern and largest chicken houses in the area.

In the 1950s, the Lehmans raised chicks in the range shelters until they reached pullet size.

Through the good times and the bad, the Lehmans had always remained independent by owning their own chickens. They marketed their eggs through R.W. Sauder for more than 50 years.

"We always knew that we had an egg market and the checks were always good," Eldon said of their decision to remain with the same company for 50 years.

But today's beginning farmers cannot afford to own their birds independently. The farm is under contract with a buyer whose family are big-time farmers who will finance the birds.

According to Eldon, good and bad years for poultry farmers used to mean making a decent living during the "bad" years and a better one during the "good" ones.

"But that definition has changed. Now good and bad years refer to making money or losing it," he said.

"You can't be an absentee owner and be successful whether you are producing or marketing eggs," Duane said. "So many changes can happen within an hour."

Changes, the Lehmans believe, will continue for the poultry industry. Because few people want to be on call seven days a week, 24 hours a day, the only solution seems to grow bigger and hire more employees.

Now the Lehmans prefer to watch the changes from a distance.

"I'm looking forward to the day when I see those little black dots from my kitchen window, and can say, 'It's not our worry,'" Anna Mary said.

Allied Producers In New York Compensated For Cheese Crisis

back up in New York similar to the Hershey Foods strike in Hershey this spring.

Meanwhile, Allied has restarted the cheese plant under the name Ogdensburg Cheese, L.L.C.

Allied's Northco Marketing Division includes about 400 dairy producers in northern New York, the chief suppliers of milk to the cheese plant in Ogdensburg. Milk prices for 400 producers under the Southco division in the southern part of New York and more than 800 producers in the Lanco division, centered in southeast Pennsylvania, were not affected by the crisis, according to Elliott.

"None of Lanco's milk was involved at Suprema in this particular situation," he said.

John K. Kauffman, a Lanco director and dairyman from Honey Brook, Chester County, confirmed the Suprema shakeup had "no effect at all" on Lanco producers. About three-quarters of Lanco milk goes to a cheese plant run by Saputo, Inc. in Reading, he said.

A Suprema security bond administered through the state paid $3.88 million to Allied on June 24 as compensation for milk purchases during the period from Jan. 15 through Feb. 23, the day before Suprema filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy, according to Charlie Huff, milk control and dairy services agent with the New York Department of Agriculture.

Milk dealers operating in New York are required by law to post such security bonds to protect suppliers. A similar law exists in Pennsylvania under the Milk Security Act, according to Doug Eberly, staff attorney with the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board. In both states, the amount of the bond is based on 40 days worth of milk purchases.

In late March, the New Jersey-based Suprema converted its case to Chapter 7 bankruptcy and liquidated assets. The corporation had been marketing cheese and operating cheese processing plants in various states, including California, Idaho, New Jersey, and New York, as well as importing cheese from abroad.

Charges that Suprema had issued false reports about the company's financial performance began coming to light late last year, eventually leading to the bankruptcy proceedings. In recent years, the cheesemaker had been noted by Forbes magazine as one of the top small companies in the U.S.

The cheese plant in Ogdensburg restarted under Allied management in early May and has been making about 200,000 pounds of cheese from 2 million pounds of milk per week, according to plant manager Joe Brooks. That's more cheese than the facility made prior to the shutdown. Suprema turned about 1.1 million pounds of milk into cheese during a typical week, Brooks said.

According to Elliott, the biggest longterm impact of Suprema's demise will be the loss of a milk buyer in the area.

Elliott said several other cheese plants are threatening to pull out of the region, including one operated by Kraft Foods in Canton, about 15 miles from the Ontario border where Allied is based. From Canton, the nearest milk bottling facilities are in Syracuse and Albany, about two and three driving hours to the south, respectively.

"The whole (milk) marketplace in northern New York is on shaky ground," he said.

Elliott said average output for Allied milk producers is about one million pounds a year — from herds of about 50 to 60 cows. The goal of the cooperative is to access markets to provide a good living for these smaller-scale dairy producers, according to Elliott.

"A good bit of our milk pricing problems come from over-expansion," he said. "Our bread and butter has been our 50-cow farms."

Silo Safety Focuses On Gases

GREEN BAY, Wis. — While the tower silo offers many benefits, there are also some inherent dangers that need to be minimized. Of these, silage gases may be the most hazardous. People and farm animals have died from the poisoning of nitrogen dioxide, the most dangerous of silo gases.

Nitrogen dioxide is a lethal gas with a yellowish-brown color and smells like laundry bleaches. When this gas achieves further oxidation and is then combined with water, it becomes a highly corrosive nitric acid. Since oxygen and water are highly available in the body, this gas can be extremely dangerous when inhaled.

Nitrogen dioxide is heavier than air and will remain at the bottom of the air mass over the silage. It can also settle down through the chute or the drain at the base of the silo. It often concentrates in the feed room and moves into the barn. It may leave a yellow stain on silage, wood, or any other material it contacts. Other indicators include dead cats or mice on the feed room floor, or dead birds in the silo.

There are several factors that affect the silage's ability to produce nitrogen dioxide. Prolonged summer droughts followed by rain just before harvest, high levels of nitrogen in the soil, unfavorable growing temperatures, prolonged cloudy weather, and root damage all increase the likelihood of nitrogen dioxide problems.

Some of these causes are unavoidable particularly during drought. However, proper fertilization, combined with proper weed, insect, and disease control measures, will reduce the chances of producing excessive nitrogen dioxide at the time of ensiling the crop. Because most nitrates are stored lower in the stalk, cutting higher than normal, 10 to 12 inches for corn, can reduce the amount of nitrates.

The majority of the gases will be produced in the first five to eight days and there are several precautions that should be taken. First post warning signs near places like the silo chute, feed room door, or outside ladder. If these signs are not presently in place, they are available from your local ISA member company. Also, ventilate the feed room in case gas spills out of the silo doors, or is blown out by the unloader. Keep the door between the feed room and the barn closed to prevent nitrogen from killing livestock.

If the silo must be entered, do not enter it the day after filling. Instead, do so immediately after last load is finished, and be sure to ventilate the silo properly. For complete instructions on proper ventilation, contact your local tower silo dealer or see your silo operator's manual.

The risks involved with the use of tower silos do not out weight the benefits of low storage losses and ease of operation. Many elements on the farm present dangers, and we accept them.

For more information regarding silo gases, contact your local ISA member or the ISA office at (920) 265-6235.

Practice Controlled Traffic In Wet Fields

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Practicing controlled traffic may afford growers a planting advantage at a time when wet conditions are keeping most farmers out of their fields.

Randall Reeder, an Ohio State University agricultural engineer, said growers who practice controlled traffic might be able to get their crop in the ground quicker despite wet conditions that would delay normal planting.

"Growers who have established controlled traffic techniques could possibly plant several days ahead of those growers who do not have controlled traffic," said Reeder. "If a grower is not using controlled traffic, he has to wait until the ground is dry enough to drive on it, even though the inch and a half seeding depth might be dry enough to plant."

Controlled traffic is a method to manage soil compaction, whereby all farm equipment is the same width so that traffic is confined to specific paths year after year, and the remainder of the soil is untouched. Controlled traffic is usually matched with conservation tillage systems, although the technique can be practiced in conventionally tilled fields, as well, with the aid of guidance systems and GPS technology.

Reeder said controlled traffic offers growers some planting advantages during a wet spring.

"A year like this the soil is going to get compacted very easily," said Reeder. "But if a grower has been practicing controlled traffic for, say three years, the driving lanes will be firm, but the untouched soil will be loose and dry out faster, giving growers the opportunity to plant earlier."

He said that the method works well during times of scattered rainfall, where a day or two of showers is followed by a few sunny days, then more rain. "If a grower is not in a controlled traffic situation, he could be waiting to plant for two weeks," he said. "But with controlled traffic, a grower could be able to plant two days after a rainfall before the next rains come in."

That quicker planting could add up to better yields, especially in a situation, such as this spring, where growers are three weeks behind the planting schedule and the window for corn planting is coming to a close.

"Farmers, as a whole, spend a lot of effort and money to get corn planted early. For example, switching from a six-row planter to a 12-row planter, or trading a tractor with tires for a rubber tracked vehicle," said Reeder. "Think of controlled traffic as just another management option to consider, and this is a year the advantage of controlled traffic in timely planting really shows up."

Not only does controlled traffic give growers a jumpstart on planting, the practice also affords growers spraying and harvesting advantages, as well as long-term ideal soil conditions for plant growth.

Research has suggested that compaction affects crop yields, because compacted soils shut out necessary water and nutrients, leading to poor root development and subsequent poor growth performance. Ten years of Ohio State research on Hoytville silty clay loam showed that through compaction, 10 percent to 15 percent of the crop was being left in the field, adding up to thousands of dollars in lost profits for large growers.

"The aim of controlled traffic is to minimize the amount of soil that gets driven on, eliminating compaction where plant roots are growing," said Reeder. "The average farmer will drive on three-fourths of the field in a two-year period. With controlled traffic, anywhere from 50 percent to 80 percent of the field never gets driven on and that includes 100 percent of the soil under a corn crop."

Despite the advantages of controlled traffic, transitioning to such a system can take time or money, or both. Getting all equipment the same width is the top priority, and minimizing the number of traffic lanes is next, said Reeder.

"A typical farmer is going to have equipment with mismatched widths — for example, a 30-foot planter, a 24-foot drill, a 15-foot combine head for corn, a 20-foot grain platform and a 50-foot sprayer," he said. "If that farmer wants to switch to controlled traffic, he could do it gradually as equipment wears out and is traded in. It might take five years, but the cost would be minimal. Switching everything overnight could be expensive."

He added that the perceived benefit of controlled traffic does not always equal the perceived cost. "Farmers might say, 'Well, that's a lot of trouble and I'm doing alright'," said Reeder. "What they really need to consider, though, is how much compaction is costing them in yield, and then realize that controlled traffic over the long-term will be beneficial."

The following are some general tips farmers should follow when making the transition to a controlled traffic system. Reeder said some adjustments may be harder to make than others.

- Decide on the basic width. For example, 30 feet is the widest width for a combine.
- For equipment that does not fit the basic width, trade for new equipment that does match, over the next few years.
- A sprayer will likely be two to three times the basic width. So if the combine width is 30 feet, the sprayer width should be 60 or 90 feet.
- Select a grain platform the same width as the corn head on combines. Grain platforms are typically wider than the corn head in order to use the combine to its full capacity when harvesting different crops. There will be some loss of efficiency harvesting soybeans and small grains.
- Buy a drill the same width as the planter. Reeder said many drills are not as wide as the planter because farmers generally perceive timeliness of planting more important for corn than for soybeans.
- Choose a combine with tires that match the row spacing so that one is driving on the least amount of soil. Use split duals or possibly, tall single tires. For no-till or mulch-till systems, tire width can be four inches less than row width. In ridge-till, the maximum recommended tire width is eight inches less than the row width.
- Fertilizer applicators must also match the width, or a multiple of it.
- Match grain cart tire spacings with the combine and run the cart in the same tracks as the previous pass of the combine.
- Use a systems approach. Controlled traffic may show ideal results in combination with improved drainage, a GPS guidance system, and continuous no-till.

GETTING THE MOST OUT OF WATER IN FREESTALL SHELTERS

Dan F. McFarland
Extension Agent — Agricultural Engineer, York

Dan F. McFarland

Supplying adequate quantity and quality of water to a group of cows can be a challenge. Lactating dairy cows will drink between 25 to 40 gallons per day, depending on dry matter intake. Intake generally increases during hot weather. In freestall shelters, a rule of thumb is that cows should be no further than 50 feet from a water station at all times, and should not be away from available drinking water for more than one hour.

Cows seem to prefer drinking water soon after being milked and after eating. Therefore, it is logical to have watering units conveniently located in these areas. The watering unit should allow the cows to insert their muzzles into the water 1 to 2 inches with their nostrils above water level. Cows can draw water at a rate of 3 to 5 gallons per minute, so the water supply and system should keep up with peak demand, especially during hot weather.

At least two water stations should be provided per group. This minimizes the opportunity for dominant cows to "control" access to a watering unit. One bowl, or 2 feet of accessible perimeter, should be provided for each "drinking" cow. The water station should allow multiple cows to drink at the same time. The number and size of the watering units should allow a minimum of 5 to 7 percent of the group to drink at the same time. Recent observations and recommendations suggest that drinking water stations allow enough space for 15 to 20 percent of the group.

Group watering units should allow access for multiple cows to drink at the same time. The easier it is for the cows to drink, the more likely they are to consume the desired amount. Watering units that use floating balls or discs, to prevent water from freezing during cold weather, can limit intake and also make monitoring water quality difficult.

Trough designs that provide plenty of water surface area are preferred. The water depth should be 6 inches or more to allow adequate supply for the cows to draw water. The top edge of the watering unit should be 24 inches to 32 inches above the floor, and the water level 2 inches to 4 inches below the top edge. A guard rail 24 inches to 30 inches directly above the edge of the watering unit will discourage cows from stepping into the water.

Crossovers are a logical place for watering units, since they are a path between the feeding and resting areas. Crossovers should be placed 60 to 80 feet apart. A recent study of three Pennsylvania dairy farms investigated the total amount of drinking water consumed from trough-type watering units, by groups of cows in freestall shelters with crossovers located at each end and near the middle of each group. Typically, 40 to 50 percent of the total water consumed by the groups in this study was from the watering unit located in the central crossover.

Water should also be available to cows soon after they leave the milking center, especially if they are in the milking center for more than one hour. Some producers have installed tubs and/or troughs near the end of the return lanes to provide more convenient access. One unit becoming popular is the "breezeway waterer." It consists of a trough made from 16-inch to 24-inch diameter PVC pipe (with most of the top removed to provide access), perhaps 20 feet or more long, installed along the side of the return lane or traffic alley to provide water for cows as they return to their group after milking.

"Tip-type" units which hold 80 to 90 gallons of water are popular in freestall shelters, since they provide good water access and supply. They are also relatively easy to clean by simply dumping the water from the unit. However, make sure to provide adequate drainage away from the area, especially during cold weather.

Where freezing is a concern, trough-type watering units with frost-free valve enclosures should be considered. These can provide a good supply of water with easy access for the cows. But these too need to be cleaned frequently to provide good water quality, with special attention to the buildup of filth in the valve enclosure.

Large stationary vats, which hold in 100 gallons or more per unit, are also used in freestall shelters. While these allow good access and a plentiful reservoir of water, they can be very difficult to clean and typically contain a buildup of feed, bedding, and other contaminants that will greatly affect water quality.

The caretakers should monitor the water quality at the water stations regularly and manage them to provide the best water possible. Waters should be flushed daily and scrubbed with a mild chlorine solution weekly (or as necessary) to remove any residue.

Good quality water in adequate supply is essential to the health, production, and profitability of dairy cows. Are you doing your best to provide clean, fresh water to your cows? Would you drink from the watering units available to your cows?

If you would like more information on providing water in freestall shelters, contact Dan McFarland at (717) 840-7408.

28 More Farms Preserved In Pa.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) - On behalf of Gov. Mark Schweiker, Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced that Pennsylvania's State Farmland Preservation Board has approved the preservation of another 28 farms totaling 3,338 acres — including Indiana County's first preserved farm.

Pennsylvania continues to preserve farmland at a pace faster than any other state in the nation. So far this year, Pennsylvania has preserved 153 farms in 29 counties totaling 17,013 acres. Since the program's inception in 1989, Pennsylvania has preserved 1,938 farms and is now just 64 farms away from meeting its farmland-preservation goal of "2002 farms in 2002."

"Pennsylvania's foundation is built on agriculture — our No. 1 industry," Secretary Hayes said. "We must continue to work with farm families and county farmland-preservation boards to protect Pennsylvania's farms.

"Pennsylvania's nation-leading farmland-preservation program would not be possible without the support of Gov. Schweiker and state lawmakers, with programs committed to saving Pennsylvania's farmland and open space."

Fifty-three counties currently participate in the state farmland-preservation program. The commonwealth purchases development rights, referred to as easements, to preserve Pennsylvania's prime farmland.

A list of farms preserved at the Farmland Preservation Board meeting follows:

Bucks County:
- Henze Farm, Solebury Township.

Indiana County:
- Franklin and Susan Glass, Blacklick Township.

Juniata County:

Horse Owners Urged To Participate In Survey

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes recently urged horse breeders, equine organizations and horse enthusiasts across the commonwealth to participate in an upcoming economic-impact study of Pennsylvania's equine industry.

The Department of Agriculture is working to identify potential participants for this study in order to get a complete picture of Pennsylvania's equine industry. The Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with Penn State University's College of Agricultural Science, is compiling a mailing list of representatives from all sectors of the equine industry to contact for the survey, which will begin this fall.

"The last time we measured the equine industry's economic impact in Pennsylvania was 12 years ago," Secretary Hayes said. "Now we're in the 21st century, and it's time for a contemporary study of all the good things that the equine industry contributes to Pennsylvania life."

The last study, conducted in 1990, showed the equine industry generated about $4 billion a year for Pennsylvania and provided 22,000 jobs.

Secretary Hayes said the impact study will assess the composition and nature of the commonwealth's equine industry, its impact on the state's economy, and its many contributions to the quality of life in Pennsylvania.

"We will be asking every equine association with membership in the state and individual horse owners to help with this study to include the compilation of important survey data," said Ann Swinker, an extension horse specialist with Penn State who is directing the survey. "The study will be dependent upon industry participation, and important to the future of Pennsylvania's equine industry."

Secretary Hayes added that the Pennsylvania Horse and Harness Racing Commissions at the Department of Agriculture will support the Pennsylvania Equine Council and Penn State University in conducting the impact study, which should be completed by the spring of 2003.

Maryland Exhibitors Succeed In Atlantic National Jr. Showmanship Contest

DEANNA CUNFER
Carbon Co. Correspondent

TIMONIUM, Md. — The Atlantic National Roll of Victory (ROV) Angus Show was recently conducted at the Maryland State Fairgrounds, Timonium, Md.

In the junior showmanship competition 93 Junior Angus Association members paraded their animals before the four-member judging team consisting of Brian Howell of Indiana; Tommy Carper, White Post, Va.; Shirley Kaufman of Sugar Loaf Farm, Staunton, Va.; and Bruce Stertzbach of Stertzbach Cattle Company, Louisville, Ohio.

Howell was last year's champion showman therefore earned the honor of returning this year as the acting judge.

Exhibitors in the showmanship competition showed their animals to Howell who acted as the judge while the other three members of the team actually did the judging and determined the placing of the contestants.

The group selected Kristen Oaks, 16, of Oaks Bluff Angus Ranch, Calhoun, La., as their grand champion showman for the event.

Oaks, winner of the intermediate division, had two heifers entered at the show this being her fifth year of showing cattle. Oaks now has the honor of returning as the acting judge for the 2003 show.

Cortney Hill-Dukehart, Sykesville, Md., was selected winner of the senior division with Ashley Reda, New Windsor, Md., topping the junior A division. The junior B division winner was Morgan Meisenheimer of Monrovia, Md. with Emily Campbell, Pennsylvania Furnace, Pa. and Candice Butler, Emmitsburg, Md., a tie in the novice division for exhibitors age eight and under.

Tree-Identification Guidebook Available

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb. — "What Tree Is That?," a pocket guide for identifying trees, is available from The National Arbor Day Foundation.

The 72-page guide will help you identify 135 different trees found in the eastern and central U.S.

Well-known trees are included: oaks, maples, spruces, and pines. Also species such as horse chestnut and mockernut hickory, sassafras and shadbush, persimmon and pawpaw and pagoda tree and pecan.

Dozens of drawings illustrate the trees' leaves or needles and their acorns, berries, seed pods, cones, and other identifying features. "What Tree Is That?" is organized to make it easy to identify trees in a simple step-by-step fashion.

"Helping people enjoy and appreciate trees is central to the educational mission of the Arbor Day Foundation," John Rosenow, the Foundation's president, said. "Being able to identify trees is important to knowing how to care for them and how to plant the right tree in the right place."

To obtain your tree ID guide, send your name and address and $3 to "What Tree Is That?," The National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, NE 68410.

SIGN OF GOOD FORESTRY

Michael T. Wolf
Extension Forest Resources

You do not have to travel very far in our state to see a green and white TREE FARM sign along the road. Actually, I know of one within a few miles of where I sit, writing this article. Right along the north-bound lane of Rt. 219, near Ebensburg, Walter R. Rossman's Tree Farm sign is hard to miss. Many of us have seen the 8-foot by 8-foot sign, or one like it, but few have stopped to read the sign or to understand the sign's purpose.

The first Tree Farm was established in 1941 in the state of Washington by the Weyerhaeuser Company. Now, the American Tree Farm System is comprised of over 64,000 Tree Farms nationwide, totaling 25 million acres of non-industrial, private forest. Pennsylvania alone has over 1,300 Tree Farms.

The mission of the Tree Farm System is "to promote the growing of renewable forest resources on private lands while protecting environmental benefits and increasing public understanding of all benefits of productive forestry." By definition, a Tree Farm is a privately owned forest dedicated to producing renewable and sustainable crops of forest products while protecting the soil, water, range, aesthetic, recreation, wood, fish and wildlife resources.

The Tree Farm System has set strict standards that need to be met before any woodland can be enrolled, or certified. Some properties do not measure up to the standard and are turned down, and others can become pioneer Tree Farms for a time until the standards can be met. Even once a woodland is enrolled as a Tree Farm, the strict standards need to be upheld or the property will be taken out of the system, or decertified.

I recently attended a training session for Tree Farm Inspectors. The training was designed to teach professional foresters how to properly inspect forests that have been certified as Tree Farms. Each Tree Farm needs to be inspected every five years by a trained inspector. Inspecting foresters include diverse representation from forest industry, consulting forestry firms, state and federal forestry agencies and university forestry extension programs.

Certification and recertification inspections are "third party" inspections conducted on the property with the forest owner present. "This is a great benefit to the Tree Farm owner," said Gary Gilmore, vice chairman of the Pennsylvania Tree Farm System and forester for DCNR's Bureau of Forestry.

Tree Farm owners are given the opportunity to glean a lot of free forestry advice and information about their woodlot from professional, experienced foresters on a regular basis. There are many other benefits to Tree Farm owners as well. Benefits include a free subscription to Tree Farmer magazine, information on national, regional and state legislative issues which may impact forest lands, opportunity to participate in a national Tree Farm Convention and Business Meeting, information about national or state educational opportunities for landowners, opportunity to participate in the annual Outstanding Tree Farmer of the Year competition, a Tree Farm sign to display on the property, and a Tree Farm certificate.

Tree Farm owners typically display their signs in a very prominent place. They really take pride in the fact that their property has met the standards set by the American Tree Farm System. Jim Stiehler, forest stewardship coordinator for DCNR's Bureau of Forestry and officer in the state Tree Farm System said, "Behind the sign is good forestry." He explained that the landowner and the Tree Farm System can both take pride in a property that has been certified. This is why strict standards must be met on each property; the Tree Farm System name is on the line each time a sign goes up.

In fact, the American Tree Farm System has made a very bold move recently. A letter from the Pennsylvania Tree Farm Committee was mailed to all participants and inspectors with a very strong message about poor timber harvesting practices...namely diameter-limit cutting and selective harvesting. Both of these are considered to be very damaging to a forest because they minimize the future potential of the forest resource. The letter says that perpetrators of such practices will be decertified and removed from the program.

Diameter-limit cutting and selective harvesting can be explained as "taking the best and leaving the rest," or harvesting only the most valuable trees. A common excuse of those who use these awful practices is, "We are just going to take the big ones out and let the little ones grow up." This may sound practical, but is it true? Actually, this cannot be true at all. In fact, the majority of our forests in Pennsylvania are around the same age.

To explain, we need to look at the history of our forests. At a recent landowner's conference, Jim Stiehler shares this synopsis..."Our forests were cut repeatedly in the 1800s. The harvest began in Eastern Pennsylvania and progressed to the west. Sawtimber was used to build cities and towns in Pennsylvania and many other states. Then the need for railroad ties took us back into the same forests to harvest lesser quality trees. Finally, the remaining trees were cut to produce charcoal that was being used to fire the ever-hungry iron furnaces of the 19th century. Steel began to replace iron, and coke (a coal product used in making steel) replaced charcoal as the industry's preferred fuel around 1900. Our woods were finally left alone. Pennsylvania's forests grew back with a vengeance! The sun was on the forest floor, we had few deer, and there were plenty of seeds and stump sprouts."

This brief account conclusively shows how we can not accept diameter-limit cutting and selective harvesting. You see, our trees are all close to the same age. The 24-inch diameter red oak in your woods is the same age as the 8-inch diameter red maple. And, if you take out the red oak with the hope of the red maple someday taking its place, you will be sadly disappointed. The larger tree is not older; it was stronger and more capable of growth than the smaller tree. By removing the most competitive trees, you will degrade your woods and hamper its future productivity as well.

Many landowners are not aware of these historical facts or the inability of diameter-limit cutting and selective harvesting to ever be productive forest practices. In fact, it seems that many of our private landowners have already made decisions that have degraded their forest. Some have even utilized diameter-limit cutting and selective harvesting more than once on the same property.

Fortunately for our resource, there are programs like the American Tree Farm System that are designed to help private landowners make wise decisions with their forests. The Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program, the VIP-Coverts Program, and various forest landowner associations can also be great resources for the landowner who would like a helping hand and some advice.

The Walter R. Rossman Tree Farm is a great encouragement to those of us who are concerned about sustaining our forest resources in the state. The Rossmans purchased the property in 1972 and became a certified Tree Farm in 1980. The property was enrolled in the Tree Farm Program by a Bureau of Forestry service forester who also helped the Rossmans receive government funding to improve the growth potential of their woodlot. This technique is broadly known as timber stand improvement (TSI). In this process, the strongest trees are chosen when the forest is in a young age class and competing trees are removed to allow faster growth on these strong, high quality trees. (TSI involves an investment of time and money, and sometimes a long wait for the return on investment, however, TSI is a great tool for improving the potential productivity of a forest.) The Rossmans were able to improve the growing conditions on 20 acres of their forest.

As a certified Tree Farm, the Rossman's Hemlock Dell Tree Farm #1607 has been inspected every five years. This has helped the Rossmans maintain communication with a professional forester for over 20 years. Then, in the winter of 1999, the Rossmans hired E. Gary Scott to be their consulting forester.

Scott helped the Rossmans plan and implement a commercial timber harvest which included the removal of over 600 trees. Because the Rossmans plan to harvest again in the near future, Mr. Scott was very careful to leave high quality, mature trees in the woods to continue to grow. The trees that were removed were of lesser quality than the trees left standing (this is the opposite of diameter-limit cutting and selective harvesting). The purpose of the 1999 harvest was to generate some money and improve, once again, the growing conditions for the Rossman's highest quality trees.

A forestry success story like the Rossmans can only be accomplished with sound, science-based forest planning. If you are a landowner or know someone who is, find out how programs like the American Tree Farm System and the Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program can help. Contact your local DCNR Bureau of Forestry service forester or the Penn State Cooperative Extension office in your county for help and further information.

If you would like some free publications on forest stewardship and proper forest management, send a letter requesting information to Mike Wolf, PSU Extension Forester, P.O. Box 390, Ebensburg, PA 15931-0390.

REGIONAL TOWNSHIP AGRICULTURAL SYMPOSIUM

An event to encourage open dialogue between agriculture and municipalities is scheduled. Be sure to ask your township officials to attend.

As our farming industry continues to advance with new technology and practices, it is becoming essential to keep our local township officials informed about agriculture. We, in agriculture, can not take for granted that our township officials have a clear understanding of what takes place on our farms and our needs to prosper in the future. Our future success, among other things, requires us to approach our local municipal officials proactively to strengthen communication. The time has come to hold an open dialogue for decision-making officials and agricultural experts who cover our region.

On Tuesday, July 30, township supervisors and planning commission members and their families from a nine-county region are invited to join agricultural experts for the first Regional Township Agricultural Symposium. The municipal officials invited to attend include representatives from Adams, Berks, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Perry, and York counties. The event will give township officials the opportunity to hear timely information on key agricultural issues and engage in an open dialogue to help strengthen communication between agriculture and local municipal officials.

The Regional Township Agricultural Symposium will be presented by The Advanced Agriculture Institute at Landis Valley Museum in partnership with The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the South Central Assembly for Effective Governance, and the Ombudsman Program supported by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and local conservation districts. The free event will be at Landis Valley Museum.

This unique multiple-county symposium was inspired by a township-agriculture event presented by the Chamber in August 2000 for Lancaster County township officials. The response from this township-agriculture event was overwhelmingly positive and planted the seed that broadened this concept to a regional symposium. While each county and township has its own set of challenges, the symposium will focus on common issues that affect the ag industry and townships across the region.

Topics for the Regional Township Agricultural Symposium will include issues and guidelines for the coexistence of community and agriculture development, changes in the municipal planning code, and partnerships with county conservation districts. Christine Kellet, director of the Agricultural Law Research and Education Center, the Dickinson School of Law, Penn State University, will serve as the facilitator of a discussion focusing on guidelines between community and agriculture. She has 27 years experience of teaching and practicing law and serves as a member of the Agricultural Law Committee of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, the Section of Natural Resources, Energy and Environmental Law of the American Bar Association, and the American Agricultural Law Association.

Donald Robinson, director of the Lancaster County Conservation District, will speak about services that county conservation districts provide to municipalities. Special emphasis will be focused on the changes in the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection's manure management manual. This will require all manure storages built in Pennsylvania to be designed and verified by a professional engineer to meet NRCS standards.

Elam Herr, assistant executive director of the Pennsylvania Association of Township Supervisors, will speak on changes to the municipal planning code, which gives municipalities the authority to adopt appropriate ordinances while providing some protection to agriculture. There will be an in-depth discussion on adopting reasonable regulations as they relate to the agriculture community.

Families of the township officials attending are also invited to attend. They will enjoy entertainment on the grounds of Landis Valley Museum throughout the day. Activities such as wagon rides, children's games with prizes, a straw bale maze, and cornhusk dollmaking will allow these families to have fun while experiencing the area's rich agricultural history.

Registration is required in order to attend. Registration will be accepted up until July 15. For more information or to register, contact Brent Landis at The Chamber at (717) 397-3531, ext. 134, or e-mail blandis@lcci.com.

4-H'ers Sharpen Evaluation Skills At Judging Contest

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — On Tuesday, 4-H'ers took the opportunity to polish their judging skills during the Southeast Livestock Judging Contest.

Using words or phrases such as conditioning, type and kind, volume and capacity, eye appeal, extension through the front end, straight from hooks to pins, and total package, the students sounded well-versed in livestock evaluation.

The 4-H'ers — 15 seniors and 12 juniors — came from Berks, Bucks, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, and York counties.

The senior participants prepared one set of reasons each of the beef, swine, and sheep classes. The juniors, said contest chairperson Jessica Schmidt, "learn to now what they're looking for," and also have the opportunity to give their own set of reasons for animal placings.

After the students ranked the animals, event officials explained their own reasons for placing the animals, teaching the students to look for muscle expression, good feet and legs, or clean front ends.

Participants evaluated two classes each of beef, swine, and sheep for a total of six classes.

"People did it for me — I learned a lot through the program. That's why I do it," said Nelson Beam, official for the swine judging.

Beam farms 600 total acres and has a cattle feeding operation besides finishing 4,500 hogs per year.

Dr. Robert Herr, who helped the students evaluate the sheep, pointed out that although they may have in mind many desirable attributes for the animals, "you can't have it all. You have to decide what you can give up," he said.

Herr complimented the students on their skills. "Even if you didn't place them right, you talked them right," he said.

At Herr's Nix Besser Farm, Narvon, which he operates with his wife Betty, the couple maintains a flock of 50-60 purebred polled Dorset sheep. In addition they have Boer goats and operate a livestock order buying and consulting service.

The official in the beef ring, Chad Walker, helps operate a family-run farm, Walker Cattle Company, a commercial cow/calf and show cattle operation in Graysville, Green County.

A former 4-H and FFA member, Walker hopes to work in an extension program with junior livestock exhibitors in the future.

The event rotates between participating counties each year.

4-H'er Mary Ellen Whitmoyer, 13, Fredricksburg, enjoys not only the challenge of livestock judging but also the opportunities to travel. To Whitmoyer, the heifers were the easiest class since she had more previous experience in judging cattle and knew to "look for level backs and straight legs," she said.

The top senior team, from York, included Donald Sunday, Dallastown; Herman Hake, Etters; Richard Heineman, Etters; and Travis Flory, Red Lion.

The top junior team included the Lancaster group of Jaymi McMichael, 13, Pequea; Johanna Rohrer, 14, Manheim; and Katrina Frey, 12, Quarryville. Not pictured is Sarah Daniels.

Top junior individual in the contest was Heath Spatz, 12, Fredricksburg. Travis Flory, 17, Red Lion, took home the senior high individual honor.

Atlantic National Angus Breeders Honor Leaders

DEANNA CUNFER
Carbon Co. Correspondent

TIMONIUM, Md. — Each of us have family members we only see a few times a year. But somehow when our paths cross the conversation and laughter picks up as if we just saw them yesterday.

So it is with the fellow Angus breeders who we meet up with at the various shows throughout the year. Some who may live relatively close to your farm you may see frequently, however, most you only see at shows or sales.

And when for some reason someone is absent from an event, just as when a relative is absent from that year's family reunion, their absence creates a big void felt by all.

This year the Angus breeders from around the country who exhibited at the Atlantic National ROV Angus Show, Timonium, Md. mourned the loss of three of their leaders.

Interim show chairman, Paul Hill, who was elected to serve as chairman of the 2003 show, extended a warm welcome to all as he dedicated the 2002 show to the founding fathers who have been instrumental to the Atlantic National show and the Angus breed as a whole.

The recent death of American Angus Association executive vice president, Dick Spader, was a great loss to the Angus breed as well as the entire cattle industry. Spader joined the association in 1969 and climbed the ladder of success to take over the reins of the American Angus Association in 1981. He was instrumental in developing the association's performance programs, which included the first Pathfinder Report, first estimated breeding values and issuance of the first Sire Evaluation Report based on field data.

Under Spader's leadership the performance movement gained momentum and the association established the database that has made the breed the source of dependable, predictable genetics that it is today. The success of the Angus performance records program has been widely accepted and now performance records are used in most other breeds as well.

During last year's Atlantic National the family of Angus breeders, especially those involved with the show from the beginning, lost another member when Joe Calderazzo passed away. Calderazzo, a polished gentleman, was instrumental in establishing many of the features of the Atlantic National that have become tradition to the show. Calderazzo was instrumental in getting the finances and providing the leadership in getting the Atlantic National started. To honor Calderazzo an award is presented to a volunteer who has given freely of their time to support the Atlantic National show. This year's winner of the Calderazzo Award was Jane Ebert, Sparta, N.C.

Another void at the 2002 show was the absence of chairman Greg Krueger. Krueger, Coatesville, accepted the chairman position over 10 years ago and at that time said he would try to do the job to the best of his ability.

In his statements during the awards presentation at the show Interim Chairman Paul Hill explained that in the formative years when the Atlantic National ROV Angus Show — ROV standing for Roll of Victory — a cumulative points system to reward excellence in national show competition — was just being established there were several "big" breeders that put quite a bit of money into the fund to get the show up and running. However, in the lean years when money was not so plentiful it was Krueger who knew how to manage money and handled the financial end of running the show. In fact the show has grown to what it is today because of Krueger's management.

Throughout the show book there were many tributes to Krueger as the exhibitors and directors tried to express their deep appreciation and loss of a fellow "family" member

Greg Krueger died in a tragic auto accident in November 2001. His wife, Jane, was seriously injured in the accident and has just recently been able to return to the family's home near Coatesville.

Jane's recovery and the continued education of daughters, Erin and Amy, take priority at this time and they can no longer keep the operation of over 200 head of Angus cattle going. They have therefore decided to have a herd and equipment dispersal sale at the farm on June 30. The family has expressed their gratitude to everyone who has helped them with preparation of the sale and caring for the animals through Jane's hospitalization and recovery while the girls were continuing their college education.

All of the Angus breeders exhibiting at the show gathered together as they dug into their hearts and pockets by each donating money with hopes of having enough to be able to have the winning bid on several items auctioned off during the dinner banquet on Saturday night of the show. Krueger had always intended to bid on the handmade quilt, a featured item of each year's auction with hopes of getting it for his wife but always busy with running the show he never got around to bidding.

Not only did the breeders purchase the quilt for Jane and daughters, Erin and Amy, but they also had the winning bids on several items including an oval tilt-top hand-painted table.

These items were presented to Krueger's family during the Awards Presentation on Sunday of the show. Krueger's mother

Manure Testing Has Advantages

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Manure testing is an important component of a nutrient management program. However, based on a 1997 survey conducted by the University of Pennsylvania in south-central Pennsylvania, 77 percent of the 994 responding farms reported "none" to manure nutrient testing.

A Wisconsin study of 1,179 dairy and beef operations concluded that although producers recognize the nutrient value of manure, few were attempting to credit manure nutrients.

There are several advantages to manure testing. They include saving on fertilizer costs, refining application rates to meet crop requirements, demonstrating a commitment to protecting surface and groundwater quality, and serving as a data source for long-term farm plans.

The objective of manure sampling is to collect a sample that represents the average composition. The basic guideline is to collect multiple samples, mix them together to make a composite sample, and send it to the lab for analysis.

The greater the potential for variability in manure composition, the more individual samples that need to be mixed to form a composite. If some manure is more liquid than others, separate composite samples may be best.

For liquid manure, sample agitated manure before application. It appears that three to five samples from well-agitated liquid manure are adequate to make a representative composite sample for testing total nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium. The first time a new manure storage is sampled, a sequence of composite samples from start to finish with separate analyses can provide information on any variation in the storage. It can also determine how well the agitation is really working.

For solid manure, it can take 10 to 40 small grab samples from a pile or bedded pack to make one composite sample. If piles have substantially different amounts of bedding, better information can be obtained by taking a separate composite from each pile or pack. After the collection of individual samples, mix the grab samples together and remove a composite sample for analysis. Approximately one quart of sample should be adequate.

Check with the laboratory to find out what kind of container to use. Generally, laboratories prefer receiving samples in plastic containers with wide mouths and screw-top lids. Containers should be filled no more than two thirds full to allow room for gases produced by fermenting manure.

The Penn State Agricultural Analytical Services has two manure testing packages. Manure test 1 costs $28 and includes analyses for percent solids, total nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium and ammonium-nitrogen.

Manure test 2 is the same as 1, with additional analyses including calcium, magnesium, sulfur, sodium, copper, zinc, manganese, iron, and aluminum. This package is most useful when information about metal application is needed.

The cost of this package is $42.

Carbon analysis is available with either package for an additional $9.50. More information on testing services can be obtained by visiting the Website at http://www.aasl.psu.edu/Smanure.html or the nutrient management Website at http://nutrient.psu.edu under dairy, manure.

Pennsylvania State University Funding Cut

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The long-awaited Pennsylvania state budget was finally passed on Friday, June 28.

Included in the budget was The Pennsylvania State University appropriations bill, HB 2490, which was signed by the Governor on June 29.

The overall university appropriation is approximately 3.65 percent less than 2001/2002 funding levels, leaving the university with few options other than raising tuition rates.

Funding for the College of Agricultural Sciences research and extension was increased by $2.268 million over the Governor's proposed budget, but remains approximately .7 percent below 2000¼002 funding levels. At current college programming levels, this will leave the college with a projected deficit for the 2002/2003 year of approximately $2.7 million.

"Although this means the college will have difficult decisions to make, under the current fiscal climate the situation could have been much worse," said Mary Wirth, director of college relations.

"We very much appreciate the bipartisan support for the College of Agricultural Sciences' budget in both the House and the Senate."

Ag Progress Days Theme, Dates Announced

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — "Discover Your Future Today" is the theme for this year's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 20-22.

Sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, the event is conducted at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, nine miles southwest of State College on Rt. 45.

Special exhibits will highlight the educational and career opportunities available to students in the agricultural sciences. Representatives from several Penn State academic departments will staff displays illustrating fields of study and the broad range of jobs in agriculture, natural resources, food science, education, and other ag-related disciplines.

"Every year, we try to provide something for virtually everyone," said Bob Oberheim, Ag Progress Days manager "As the number of exhibitors and activities continues to grow, we're anticipating perhaps the most diverse show we've ever offered."

More than 350 commercial exhibitors will display the latest goods and services. Interactive displays, guided tours and workshops will show how research and educational programs are addressing important issues, safeguarding our food supply and the environment, and helping to improve the efficiency and profitability of agriculture and related industries.

Faculty and extension staff from the college will be on hand to answer questions and provide information on crops and soils; dairy, livestock and equine production; conservation practices; integrated pest management, woodlot management; farm safety; and home gardening and lawn care. Special workshops will address the impact of the new Farm Bill on Pennsylvania agriculture.

Other activities planned for this year's event include a skid steer rodeo and a special high-tunnel vegetable production tour. Field demonstrations will feature hay mowing, hay rakes and tedders, baling, bale handling, commercial field spraying, and deep tillage tools to break soil compaction. In addition, four equipment companies will demonstrate a variety of equipment, such as planters, forage mixers, loaders, bale processors, baggers, and forage platforms.

Also planned are family living exhibits and demonstrations; a corn maze; cut flower beds and exhibits; storytelling; an equine program, including special National Quarterhorse Association exhibitions; live animal and insect displays; a tree-climbing adventure; a museum of antique farm and home implements; and special activities to commemorate the centennial of 4-H.

Because of concerns over the possible transmission of foot-and-mouth disease and other foreign animal diseases, visitors who have been overseas within two weeks of attending Ag Progress Days are asked not to visit the event's live-animal exhibit areas.

Ag Progress Days hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Aug. 20, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Aug. 21, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Aug. 22. Admission and parking are free.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free from July 15-Aug. 22 or visit the Ag Progress Days Website at http://apd.cas.psu.edu.

was also present for the presentation.

The proceeds from this auction, portion of the semen sale and donations received go to the Krueger Memorial Fund as well as the Atlantic National Angus Foundation who sponsors the Atlantic National Merit Awards each year. The awards honor the contributions of junior members wishing to continue their education and in need of financial assistance.

Barb Weaver, Pennsylvania Angus Association secretary and committee chair person, said as she presented the awards that consideration was made with an emphasis on the work of the junior members at the Atlantic National and participation in Junior Angus Association events. A total of $6,500 was presented to eight individuals with the top individual receiving an additional $1,000 from the Greg Krueger Memorial Merit Award.

Individuals selected as this year's winners were Karl Holshouser and Callie Birdsell of North Carolina; Amy Wolfrey and Jonathan Barnes of Virginia; Courtney Hill-Dukehart of Sykesville, Md.; and Pennsylvania residents Jamie Hower of Bethlehem; Amy Krueger of Coatesville; and Suzanne Bishard of York. Jonathan Barnes of Dolphin, Va. was the winner of the Greg Krueger Memorial Merit Award.

Penn State Names York County Extension Director

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension has named Jeffrey Myers of Westminster, Md., as county extension director in York County, effective July 1. Myers will replace Tom Becker, who has served as interim director since September 2001.

"Although most open extension positions currently are frozen due to budget constraints, filling this position was key to maintaining our support of the region's agriculture, communities and families," said Michelle Rodgers, regional director for Penn State Cooperative Extension's seven-county Capital Region. "Jeff's broad range of experience will serve the people of York County and the Capital Region well."

From 1999 until his appointment, Myers was a consultant with Del-Myr Associates. In that position, he assisted such groups as the Michigan Farmland and Community Alliance and the Maryland State Fair with organizational and program development. He also appraised cattle for the American Jersey Cattle Association and delivered motivational speeches in 4-H and public school settings.

From 1996 to 1999, Myers worked for Maryland Cooperative Extension as assistant executive director of the Maryland 4-H Foundation.

As a member of the Maryland State 4-H faculty from 1994 to 1999, Myers designed statewide volunteer leadership training programs, planned and led statewide youth educational events, directed curriculum development and served as liaison to state and national committees in the areas of natural resources, animal and plant sciences, and science and technology.

Myers was owner-operator of Del-Myr Farm in Westminster, Md., from 1984 to 1994.Myers developed a breeding stock marketing program, managed employees and consulted with specialists on herd health, genetics, milk quality and animal welfare.Myers received his bachelor's degree in agricultural extension and education from the University of Maryland in 1976 and his master's degree in animal science from Michigan State University in 1985.

Schuylkill Hosts Fitting, Showmanship Demonstrations

DEANNA CUNFER
Carbon Co. Correspondent

SUMMIT STATION (Schuylkill Co.) — The Schuylkill County Fairgrounds was the site of a recent demonstration by Penn State Senior Extension Associate Bob Mikesell geared to prepare 4-H and FFA members for the upcoming fair season.

Approximately 60 4-H and FFA members, parents, and leaders from Schuylkill and Carbon counties attended the demonstration where Mikesell presented both fitting and showmanship information for swine, market steers, and dairy beef exhibitors.

The Schuylkill County Cooperative Extension hosted the event with Kara Graver, 4-H youth coordinator; Kirsten Kauffman, 4-H program assistant; and Summer Intern Briana Shealer, organizing the schedule.

Mikesell, in his fourth year at Penn State, is also involved with curriculum development for the 4-H program, having written many of the project and reference books used in the program.

After reviewing a prepared list of equipment needed, things to do at home prior to the show, and rules of showmanship, Mikesell invited members of the audience to climb over the fence and practice their swine showmanship skills. Several groups accepted the offer with Mikesell giving helpful suggestions to each. Some were experienced showman while others were handling a pig for the first time.

"It pays to spend time in the pen with your pigs," Mikesell said. "It will pay off." According to Mikesell, members should practice showing their animals at home because it helps to prepare both the animals and member for the show experience.

Mikesell then moved to the other end of the barn and reviewed the items used in fitting and showing both dairy beef and market steers. He stressed that dairy beef, a popular project in counties surrounding Schuylkill County but relatively unheard of in other parts of the state, are shown and fitted like a beef market steer, not a dairy animal.

The dairy beef project involves taking a week-old neutered male dairy breed calf and raising it as a beef feeder with intentions of ending up in a feedlot.

First Mikesell put a dairy beef animal in the grooming chute, clipping the hair as you would in preparation for the show. He then did the same on a market steer, showing the audience how the appearance of the animal improves depending on how the hair is trimmed.

Mikesell stressed that this was a hands-on demonstration and several members then took hold of the halters of the dairy beef animals and practiced their showmanship skills.

Bob Mikesell, Penn State senior extension associate reviews steps in preparing and showing dairy beef and market steers for the fair season.

$100 Million To Promote U.S. Ag Overseas

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman and U.S. Trade Representative Robert B. Zoellick recently reaffirmed the Bush Administration's commitment to open new markets for U.S. agricultural goods and announced the release of over $100 million in Market Access Program and Quality Samples Program funds to promote U.S. agriculture products overseas.

Veneman and Zoellick met with agricultural groups to discuss a framework for boosting agricultural exports, which includes: the use of trade promotion programs for agriculture products overseas; aggressive plans for world trade negotiations and free trade agreements; attacks on trade barriers and subsidies that hurt U.S. agriculture; and efforts to increase world demand through economic growth and sustainable development.

"Access to overseas markets is critical to American agriculture. Partnership programs such as the Market Access Program and the Quality Samples Program are effective tools to promote U.S. agricultural exports," stated Veneman. "The ability of our farmers and ranchers to take full advantage of export markets also depends on passage of Trade Promotion Authority."

"We need Trade Promotion Authority to open markets for our farmers and ranchers. With TPA the United States will be able to negotiate from a position of strength," said Zoellick.

PENN STATE STUDENTS HAVE 'EUROPEAN EXPERIENCE'

L. Muller
E. Cash
Penn State

Twenty students in the College of Agricultural Science at Penn State recently returned from a wonderful "European Experience." The students were accompanied by faculty members Dr. Erskine Cash, Dr. Larry Muller, and Dr. Marianne Fivek.

The study tour focused on animal agriculture and agribusiness in the Netherlands, Belgium, and France. In addition, students visited museums and historical sites in order to gain an appreciation of the culture and history of these countries.

The two-week "Study Tour to Western Europe" was part of the College of Agricultural Science's commitment to enhance International opportunities and experiences for students.

During the five days in the Netherlands, visits included:

- The major agricultural research station at Lelystad.
- Wageningen University — one of the leading agricultural universities in the world.
- Two dairy farms — one making cheese and the second with two robotic milkers.
- Marchigiana beef cattle farm.
- Polder Museum in Lelystad.
- Anne Frank House in Amsterdam.
- Keukenhof Flower Gardens.
- Kinderdijk (original village with windmills).

One of the highlights was seeing four different types of robotic milkers.

One dairy farm had two robotic milkers for 120 cows. The reclamation of the land from the sea called Polders accounts for about one-third of the agricultural land in the Netherlands.

The group spent three nights in Brussels and visited the veterinary school in Liege, Belgium. One of the highlights was the visit to a beef farm with about 200 head of the double-muscled breed — Belgium Blue. The group visited a horse farm with the Ardennes breed. An American Military Cemetery near the site of the final battle of World War II (Battle of the Bulge) was a sobering moment for the group. The group visited several tourist attractions over the weekend and sampled various Belgium chocolates.

The group stayed six nights at the Institute for Superior Agriculture in Beauvais, France (ISAB), located about 50 miles north of Paris. The University is entirely agriculture with about 600 students. We were given a welcome and key to the city of Beauvais by the mayor. Highlights of the six days in France included visits to:

- Paris caramel and chocolate business.
- Organic dairy farm.
- University swine research farm.
- Massey Ferguson tractor plant.
- Slaughter house and meat processing plant.
- Foie gras farm.
- Snail farm.
- Bird sanctuary.
- German military cemetery.
- Several cathedrals and castles.
- Paris — Eiffel Tower, city tour, museums, etc.

About two-thirds of the students on the trip were majoring in animal science or animal bioscience. Our majors represented included agriculture and extension education, food science, horticulture, environmental science, and journalism.

The purpose of the study tour was to enhance the global awareness of the students and broaden students' awareness of agriculture industries and cultures of different countries. Students received two academic credits for the study tour and submitted written report and portfolio of the trip.

Internationalizing The Curriculum

The College of Agricultural Sciences is making a strong commitment to enhance the international opportunities and experiences of Penn State students. Currently, less than two percent of the students in the College of Agricultural Sciences have an international experience. Yet, more employers are looking for "global-ready" graduates.

In 2000, the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges prepared a report entitled "Expanding the International Scope of Universities," which highlighted that international education must be part of the mission in colleges of agriculture. Dr. Graham Spanier, president of Penn State, stated recently, "the truth is that the idea of going global is no longer a novelty ← it is an essential requirement in the survival of nearly all enterprises in the new millennium."

The Department of Dairy and Animal Science is committed to enhancing the international opportunities and experiences of students in the animal sciences. Enhancing the international experiences to prepare global-ready graduates requires extra resources.

The College of Agricultural Sciences and the Departments of Dairy and Animal Science and Poultry Science are committed to mobilizing the resources and obtaining additional resources to provide a richer educational experience for their students.

DEP Secretary Tours Munnell Run Farm To See 'Growing Greener' Results

COOLSPRING TOWNSHIP (Mercer County) — On behalf of Gov. Mark Schweiker, Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary David E. Hess today visited Munnell Run Farm in Mercer County to see the results of Growing Greener projects aimed at updating farming practices to improve the environment and environmental education.

"Munnell Run Farm is a Mercer County Conservation District demonstration project that gives Mercer County farmers a first-hand look at environmentally friendly agricultural practices," Secretary Hess said.

"This is a working farm, operated by the Rains family, that offers information and encouragement to farmers who want to get involved with water-quality protection and erosion prevention on their own farms. I am delighted that Growing Greener is part of this effort."

The Mercer County Conservation District has received two Growing Greener grants totaling nearly $50,000 to expand the variety of best management practices (BMP) at the farm and to provide tools for the Munnell Run Farm Education Center.

The BMP projects include streambank fencing, improved livestock stream crossings and barnyard-runoff control. Education projects include the development of a tour wagon to allow groups to view BMPs throughout the farm property.

"This project has a number of beneficial impacts," Mercer County Conservation District Manager Jim Mondok said. "Munnell Run and, further downstream, the Shenango River will run cleaner. The Rains family cows will be healthier with less mud and muck to wade through.

"Farmers throughout the area can see right in their own backyards how improvements that benefit the environment can also make a difference in their bottom line.

Many Mercer County farmers are interested in looking at what we've accomplished here and maybe trying some of these improvements themselves."

Munnell Run Farm used to be part of the old Mercer County Home. The property was divided into a non-profit skilled care facility, now called Woodland Place, and the Rains family leases 96 of the original 150 acres for farming. The Rains family pastures Black Angus cattle, puts up hay and plants cropland.

The Conservation District oversees the BMP installation.

The farm also is home to a trout nursery through a Conservation District partnership with the Neshannock Chapter of Trout Unlimited and the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission.

DEP recently awarded the Conservation District a $15,000 Community Environmental Project fund grant to construct a wetland to treat wastewater from the trout nursery and barnyard runoff.

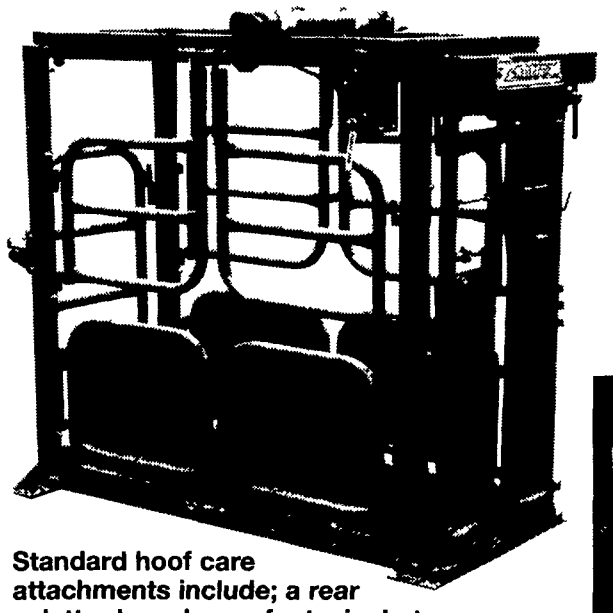
Combination Hoof Care/Vet Chute

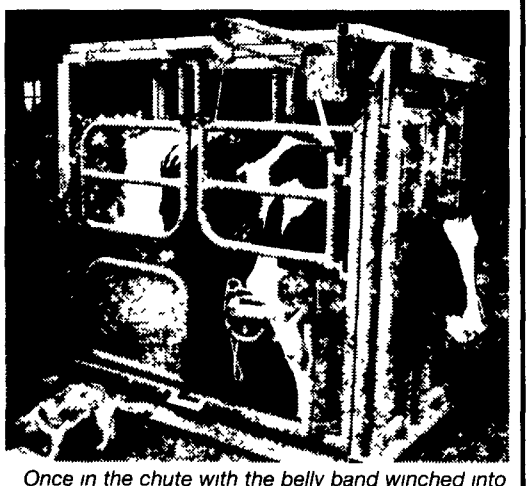


This highly versatile equipment can be used to secure a cow safely and efficiently for foot care or veterinary services.

Side panels and gates easily replace hoof care accessories to create a vet chute where almost any common vet procedure can be performed.

Standard hoof care attachments include; a rear splatter board, rear foot winch, two front foot winches and a full width belly band and winch to lift the animals weight off their feet. All winches have heavy duty friction brakes providing constant, positive holding action.

ALL STEEL PARTS ARE POWDER COATED USING THE PBZ FIVE-STEP PROCESS.



Once in the chute with the belly band winched into working position, the cow is safely secured for foot treatment

Farm Show Complex Construction Update

PDA Farm Show Complex

Hon. Samuel E. Hayes Jr.
Pa Secretary of Agriculture

Building For The Future – On Schedule

The massive structural frames are up for the new Livestock Barn, Large Arena, and Exposition Hall at the Farm Show Complex. Now it is time for the exterior walls. And, they are going up — masonry and steel.

Tiered concrete has been poured for the spectator seating component of the new large arena. There will be 1,700 individual seats anchored to the concrete underpinning. The new large arena floor will be about 300 feet by 150 feet.

The Cameron Street entrance to the new construction is taking structural shape. For sure, the Cameron Street perspective will have a new look as a result of the new construction. This new entrance will be convenient and expansive for visitors coming to the Farm Show Complex in special travel vehicles. And it will be very inviting and attractive for pedestrians walking from nearby parking areas. This Cameron Street entrance will provide easy access to both the current Farm Show Complex and all of the new venues.

Work continues on the two-level concourse that connects the new construction with the present Farm Show Complex. As previously reported, the lower concourse level will be for livestock and their handlers. This lower concourse level will also be used by vendors to serve all venues of the complex — present and new. The upper concourse level will be for pedestrians.

Visitors to the Farm Show Complex will be able to use the upper level concourse to conveniently enter both the new venues and the venues which are already part of the current Farm Show Complex. Most of the framework for the two-level concourse is in place.

Only the concourse framework which actually attaches to the existing complex is yet to be completed. From an engineering standpoint, this connector task is very difficult.

The physical outline of all the new construction is in place. Tradesmen will soon begin the work of bringing the necessary infrastructures into the new construction.

There is one coordinating contractor, but there are dozens and dozens of subcontractors needed to complete all aspects of the new construction. Timely coordination of all tradesmen, new building materials, and functions is like directing several orchestras all at the same time. Everything is "in-sync" at the present time.

Before ending this report, I want to provide an update on other construction at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture that is also moving forward.

Concrete footers are being poured for the Department of Agriculture's new $6.4 million Livestock Evaluation Center. It took a month of extensive excavation work to prepare the Centre County site for actual construction. When complete, the Department of Agriculture will provide Pennsylvania's livestock industry with a world-class Livestock Evaluation Center.

And, this week concrete footers were scheduled to be poured for a new Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture building at Ag Progress Days. This permanent steel building will be ready for PDA's exhibit at Ag Progress Days in August.

A lot of building is going on at the Department of Agriculture. Historic!

Dr. Henzler Speaks On Avian Influenza In Japan

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — David J. Henzler, D.V.M. Epizootiology program manager with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Ephrata resident, was a recent guest lecturer in May at the Institute of Medical Science, University of Tokyo.

Dr. Henzler spoke on the Pennsylvania experiences with avian influenza. Three other veterinary scientists also made presentations from the countries of Mexico, Italy and Japan.

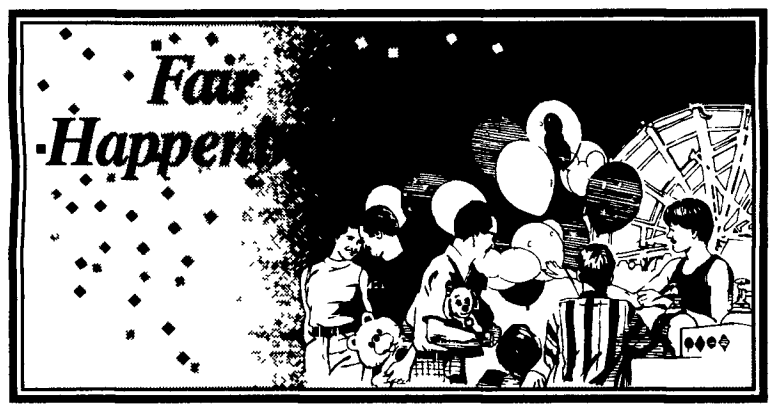
Attending the lectures were 220 Japanese poultry businessmen, scientists and representatives of the Japan's Ministry of Agriculture.

This was Dr. Henzler's second trip to Japan. He was an invited guest lecturer in November of 1997 discussing Salmonella enteritidis and the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP).

PEQAP is a program in which egg farmers voluntarily enroll with PennAg Industries, and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture to lower the risk of this particular Salmonella in eggs. PEQAP is the most intensive Salmonella risk reduction program in the United States.

Additionally, Dr. Henzler presented a scientific paper at the Fifth International Symposium on Avian Influenza, April 14-17 at the University of Georgia. Twenty-two countries were represented at this conference.

Dr. David J. Henzler, center, along with two Japanese poultry businessmen was one of four guest lecturers worldwide at a recent technical symposium on avian influenza at the University of Tokyo.



Premium Books Available For Elizabethtown Fair

The Elizabethtown Fair has announced that premium books for the 29th Annual Elizabethtown Fair are available at Brandt's Farm Supply, Elizabethtown Borough Office, G & G Agway, Groff Meats, Hostetter's Hardware, Kreamer Medical, McCracken's Pet Food and Supply, Messick Farm Equipment, Rutt Appliances, and White Oak Mills.

The premium book includes information on livestock and competitive competitions as well as children and adult contests. The cover picture, "An American Tradition" was designed and painted by Nancy M. Landis. In her words, "The Elizabethtown Fair is built around many traditions. The fair itself is the traditional season opener for all the fairs of Lancaster County. Farming practices, recipes, contests and many home crafts are other traditions celebrated by the fair. This year's premium book cover painting depicts one of Lancaster County's oldest and best preserved traditions. A farmer, breaking the ground for a new season of crops, is also moving this age-old tradition forward into another season."

"An American Tradition," donated to the Elizabethtown Fair by Nancy Landis and framed by Bonnie Siegrist, will be sold at the Fair's Art and Crafts Auction, Friday, Aug. 23.

The 29th annual fair will run from Aug. 19 through Aug. 24. Area FFA, 4-H members, and others show their dairy and beef cattle, sheep, swine, goats and rabbits - during competitive judging held through the week. Deadline for animal entries is Aug. 1. For information entering animals contact Denny Drager at (717) 426-2940.

Entries of crafts, needlework, baked goods, produce, and plants are exhibited for judging at the Elizabethtown Brethren in Christ Church, adjacent to the fairgrounds. For information on these entries, contact Sara Myer at (717) 367-3344.

5th Annual Retail Farm Market Bus Tour Scheduled

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The incentive to have a farm market is obvious. The closer you can get to the retail customer, the more retail food dollars go in your pocket.

If you want to sell retail you have to provide the services wholesalers and retailers provide. That can be tough if you don't have a suitable location, you are not very creative or don't have the knack of dealing with people. If you do, the opportunities are there.

Merchandising, signage, display techniques, diversification, store design and layout, pricing, innovative products, and ideas that lead to success are some areas where producers feel training is needed.

To provide examples of successful techniques, Penn State Cooperative Extension, in consultation with the Pennsylvania Retail Farm Market Association (PaFarm), is conducting a full day bus tour in Centre County, August 1, 2002.

Four premiere retail farm markets are hosting this excellent educational opportunity.

Way Fruit Farm near Port Matilda is the first stop. Harner Farm, west of State College is the second market we are touring. Meyer Dairy Store is the third market and where tour participants are having lunch. The final stop is Tait's Farm Food, south of State College.

Any farm market owner, manager, or other personnel interested in seeing and learning from retail farm market entrepreneurs is invited to attend.

The group will tour each operation and focus on what has made it a success.

Buses reservations can be made for five different pick-up locations: State College, Lansdale, Allentown, Lancaster, or Harrisburg. For additional information contact your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or call John Berry at (610) 391-9840.

Pennsylvania's Ram, Boar Performance Tests Reach Midpoint

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes recently announced that 81 rams and 60 boars on test at the Livestock Evaluation Center have passed the midway point of their evaluations.

"Pennsylvania agriculture continues to lead as we enter the 21st century," said Hayes. "Our sheep and swine industries are recognized for the quality of their animals. To stay competitive, Pennsylvania must maintain the excellence of its breeding programs, one way to do that is through the use of tested genetics."

Based on performance of rams and boars on test, the department's Livestock Evaluation Center can objectively determine their genetic potential. Thus, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) is able to offer information to breeders for effective management of their breeding programs. The end result is offspring that is genetically more viable and efficient for the producer.

The 81 rams on test were evaluated on their average daily gain, the lean muscle mass gain, the structural correctness, breeding soundness, and other tests over the course of 84 days.

The 60 boars on test were placed into groups or pens of three. Boars are evaluated for weight gain, structural soundness, and feed efficiency. Each pen is evaluated until the average weight of the pen reaches 250 pounds.

Results of the Ram Performance Test at midpoint are as follows, listing breed, number on test, breed average daily gain (ADG), and breed average weight per average day of age (Wt/DOA).

Corriedale- Fall lamb: one ram, .81 ADG, .64 Wt./DOA

'Queen Of Commodities' Speaks Out For Agriculture

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

EASTON, Md. — Amanda Kaye Brown should be designated National Queen of Commodities.

After successfully representing the beef and grain industries, Amanada Brown takes a bite for watermelon.

Although no such title exists, the 20-year-old fulfills that role in the many different responsibilities she undertakes. She wears the tiara of Mar-Del Watermelon Queen, is both the former Maryland and Delaware Beef Ambassador, the former Talbot County Farm Bureau Queen, a motivational speaker for the Maryland Grain Producers, and is in charge of agriculture marketing and promotions for Delmarva Produce.Com.

They're only the official titles for this University of Maryland College Park senior, who considers family and farm responsibilities a priority in her busy life, is proficient at gardening cooking, sewing, flower arranging, and playing numerous musical instruments.

In her many leadership positions both on and off the college campus, Amanda's goal is to make a difference in lives today and tomorrow, primarily by teaching people about food and its source.

"I'm amazed how little the public knows about agriculture and how much it effects our lives," Amanda said of conversing with people during numerous promotions she presents.

"Fortunately, I love to talk," Amanda said of her eagerness to share her first-hand knowledge on agriculture's impact on society.

She finds her college peers interested in her staunch support of ag issues. But there is nothing more convincing than bringing a carload of friends to the family farm in Easton, Md., where they express awe at the wide open spaces and the sounds and sights of nature.

"This farm came down through my mom's side of the family," Amanda said. The house is surrounded by tall large leaf Linden trees, which her great grandfather brought with him on the boat from Germany. When her great-grandparents first arrived in the states, they traveled West intending to settle there. But the windy and cold weather influenced them to return to the Eastern Shore area within their first year. They purchased the 100-acre property with a log home.

Family lore retells the story of part of the farm acreage being given to the slaves following the Civil War.

Brown's grandfather was born in the log house. Later, the family purchased a nearby dairy farm and the original property became a rental property, which fell into great disrepair.

Brown's parents purchased the decrepit property in 1975. He said the house had rotted windowsills and so much disrepair that they considered tearing it down. Instead, they renovated it, exposing the logs on some walls and the hand-hewn ceiling beams.

Both Wesley and Linda Brown taught at Easton High School. After eight years of teaching high school math and farming on the side, Wesley switched to equipment sales for 12 years. Now he farms full time on the three farms that his wife's dad had acquired before his death and three additional rented farms for a total of 450 tillable acres.

"It's a one-man show," Wesley said of growing oats, wheat, clover, soybeans, corn, and barley. He does his own harvesting and sells the grain locally. Amanda received her CDL license when she was only 16 years old to help with the hauling.

In 1985, the family switched from a dairy to a beef operation. The Browns maintain 25 brood cows and sell feeder calves. They raise a mixture of hybrid cattle using their own Angus bull with Hereford females.

In addition to renovating the log house, the Browns also needed to build up the farm's soil. On one of the farms, the previous owner had a contract for a gravel pit operation. The farm is still used in this way, but the contract requires that no topsoil leave the farm. Six different kinds of gravel are excavated on 20 acres, but not more than oneacre is excavated at a time. The topsoil is replaced after each excavation, but requires three to four years before the soil is again productive.

The farm has become the annual site for the Satthoff family reunion with about 100 people traveling from distant states to swap stories passed down through the generations.

"I have a better appreciation of family ties," Amanda said since going away to college. "Many of my friends don't have ties to family members. They don't understand farm responsibilities. I believe in putting my family first before hanging out with my friends because family will always be here for me."

Amanda's mom has three sisters who "pitch in and help each other out when needed. "We aren't on each other's payroll," said her mother. Amanda grew up making corsages for her aunt who owns a flower shop.

She attributes her abundant energy to her parents. Her mom grew up milking cows and returned from her senior prom in order to milk cows. "You don't vacation from dairy cows," she said.

As a culinary arts teacher, Linda often took her daughter with her to meetings, a fact that projected a bit of human interest when Amanda applied for a consumer science scholarship. "I told them I was attending their meetings ever since I was two years old."

She got the scholarship.

Both parents were active in 4-H and each won national trips to 4-H conventions. The parents now serve as 4-H leaders; her mom received a 25-year award recently for her leadership.

It's not surprising that both their children have participated in numerous clubs and competitions and exhibit at four fairs. Both Amanda and Benjamin, 14, have excelled in public speaking and demonstrations. Amanda won a $2,000 scholarship through her horticulture project and was named national 4-H horticulture champion for her container gardening project.

Recently Benjamin won the Maryland 4-H public speaking contest on the same day he competed for the All-Shore band, where he was named first chair for the clarinet.

For projects, the siblings raise beef and chickens, vegetables, and flowers.

Not only has Amanda excelled in 4-H sewing competitions, but two years in a row Amanda won the state Make-It-With-Wool Contest, which qualified her to participate in national competition.

At church, her mother directs the junior choir and Amanda plays the piano, and Benjamin sings. He also plays soccer, baseball, and football. Both siblings excel in playing musical instruments and play the trumpet, trombone, clarinet, keyboard. Amanda studied piano 14 years and is now studying organ. She plays the euphonium for the college band.

'Queen Of Commodities' Speaks Out For Agriculture

At college Amanda revived the defunct Pre-Collegiant 4-H — FFA Club, which enables 4-H'ers and FFA'ers to continue to serve the community and make a positive influence. Representatives from the club teach a lesson on character counts, which combines with ag to take to middle schoolers.

"We chose middle schoolers because that age group is often overlooked in ag education," Amanda said. Fourteen clubs help link students and the college together. Now in its third year, Amanda serves as the vice president. She also is appointed as committee member to plan Maryland Ag Day.

Having working parents sometimes forced the children to excel in areas where they wouldn't have otherwise. Amanda said that she learned to cook — even serving meals to the silo crew because her mom was at work.

At college Amanda's cooking expertise is savored by her classmates. She even prepared a dinner for the marching band instead of the band ordering their traditional takeout.

Her brother Benj's kitchen skills were displayed recently when he baked a pineapple chiffon cake for his sister's birthday.

Produce from the family's large garden is preserved through canning and freezing.

Amanda believes that parts of one's life becomes linked together with other parts in unexpected ways. "You never know who you'll meet and how they will affect your life in the long run," she said.

As an example, Amanda said that for two years, she served as the Maryland Beef Ambassador, and through that contact was asked to serve as the Delaware Beef Ambassador. Her position at the Delaware State Fair was in the ag commodity building next to the Watermelon Board, which asked her to run for Watermelon Queen. Although Amanda always grew watermelons in her garden, her family does not grow watermelons for resale.

"I consider myself a farm girl—not the queen-type, but I decided to enter the day before the deadline. When I won I was totally floored," she said.

Amanda believes in giving 125 percent to every responsibility so it isn't surprising that her work was recognized and she found employment with Delmarva Produce.Com. It is a two-year-old company formed by watermelon farmers to increase profits and avenues for watermelon sales. Brown explained that watermelon farmers in Delaware, Maryland, and southern states wanted to set-up on-line sales.

"We are taking baby steps and overcoming obstacles, but our main goal is to get buyers to come to the "Block" (Eastern Shore Produce Auction in Laurel, Del.), where buyers and growers meet."

Although Amanda lives in Maryland, she is only 30 minutes away from Delaware. The watermelon commodity in both states work together to market melons, believing that a stronger voice can build a better industry."

On Monday through Friday, beginning in July, Brown arrives at the Block at 6:30 a.m. before the auction begins to record information and sales that she posts on-line at delmarvaproduce.com.

Amanda explained that watermelon harvest begins in Florida and heads north. Each area has its own growing season. Because of the warmer weather, harvest season begins in Florida but comes to end during hot weather during the Delmarva area's busiest season in July through August.

Through her promotion involvement, Amanda has lobbied senators on Capitol Hill, met with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman, and numerous functions in both Maryland and Delaware every weekend since her coronation in February. Keeping up with college classes and participation in the band leaves little time for a social life, but "I enjoy my work," Amanda said.

"I always wanted to be a teacher, because I saw my mom and all she did. But now I'm exploring ag marketing and promotion. Regardless of my career, ag will always be a part of my life as long as I live," she said.

She is concerned that many youth are leaving agriculture because of the hard work and less profitable labor. She said, "I would not have wanted to be raised any place other than the farm. You'll never find a better person than one involved in agriculture."

Amanda will compete at the National Watermelon Queen Pageant in 2003.

Amanda and her brother share a 4-H Wall of Fame, where many of their ribbons and trophies are displayed.

Here's proof—the Mar-Del Watermelon Queen raises her own watermelons.

At the University of Maryland, where Amanda is a senior, she also set up a booth promoting the watermelon industry during Maryland Ag Day. She said more than 66,000 people attended the event including 36 congressmen.

On Being a Farm Wife
(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

These regal machines are a familiar sight across the rural countryside right now.

Combines.

As kids, we would park ourselves at the edge of our shaded front lawn and watch our farm neighbors tending their crops on the hills and valley we overlooked. No machine fascinated us more than the combine, creeping past our perch on its way to the grain fields. Lumbering giants, combines roar into fields of barley and wheat in fields of our area in late June and July, header on the front end gobbling up wide rows of golden heads, spewing trawy residue out the back.

Inside the massive belly of the machine, a whole battalion of little gremlins standing in formation rolls the grain heads between their busy little fingers. The grain kernels are then tossed onto tiny wheelbarrows pushed by another group, who roll them up a grade and dump them into a bin, hauling the straw the other direction on their way back.

No? That's not how it works? Excuse me. I stand corrected.

The Farmer insists there are not gremlins pushing wheelbarrows inside a combine. They're belts and chains, gears and drive sprockets, pulleys and splines and spindles and shear pins and lots of other parts threshing the grain from the chaff.

Doesn't matter what parts are officially called. They're gremlins. And they behave like gremlins.

"Of all the machines on a farm, I think combines are more trouble than anything," sighed a neighbor a few days ago, verbalizing the opinion I formed shortly after I, too, began having to write checks for its care and feeding.

"Combine is spelled T-R-O-U-B-L-E," I had just grumbled to a visitor the day before, eyeballing the machine parked in the back yard under the shade of the maple trees. Ten feet into our first grain field, one of the gremlins had broken a bone.

It wasn't a main gremlin, just an underling. But it didn't live at a convenience spot. Nor was a substitute gremlin on hand. No matter. The ailing gremlin had to be retrieved via yanking out — with a front end loader — a giant piece, lots of bolts, metal, and fellow gremlins. Meanwhile, its replacement was en route, riding first-class in one of those brown parcel delivery trucks which tally frequent traveler points dropping off parts at our place during cropping season.

Perhaps the gremlin had gone under the weather due to the excessive heat under which it was working on what was to that point the hottest day of the year. That, and the concurrent choking humidity, prompted The Farmer to park the combine in the back yard's shade to undertake gremlin replacement.

"If I tried to work on a machine in a shady yard, I'd probably fall asleep," joked a fellow farmer I lamented to about gremlins during a phone chat. Banging and hammering periodically sounding from the direction of the machine behind the house attested that no one was napping. Except for the gremlins.

Ancestors of the combine were those giant threshing machines sometimes displayed at antique equipment shows, massive beasts of metal and boilers, belching smoke and steam and heat and noise.

Did farm wives on the wheat belts of the prairie lament the dirt and dust and soot they generated? How many prairie and/or farm fires were started by errant sparks from threshers? How many harvest workers were maimed or killed through history by their explosions or other crankiness?

Pondering that history, I rethought my grousing about gremlins and reminded myself to be grateful for a modern machine that does not have a stationary boiler and cranky steam gauges. My gratitude grew when the gremlins were all feeling chipper once again and roared off down the field road. Only to be parked a short time later when — despite our continuing drought and steadily dropping water supplies — it began to shower. Just enough to bring grain harvest to a halt and give the gremlins yet another afternoon to loaf.

Progress has replaced steam threshers with modern combines. They in turn will likely be replaced by robotic harvest machines powered by computer chip brains, lasers, and global positioning directional modes.

And grain harvest will still be subject to that still most unpredictable mother of all gremlins.

Mother Nature.

How To Clean Wicker Furniture

Wicker furniture is a term used for woven reed, rush, cane, willow and other plant fibers. Rattan and bamboo furniture are made of solid stalks, not woven reed.

To clean wicker furniture, use a brush attachment on a vacuum cleaner and possibly a small hand held brush to push dirt out of crossed reeds and tiny spaces. Use the brush gently to avoid breaking the reed.

The furniture can be washed using a soft brush dipped in a mild soapy warm water solution. Use the least amount of the water solution necessary to clean the furniture because over-wetting of the reed can cause it to warp. Allow the furniture to dry thoroughly in a shady area.

Rattan and bamboo furniture can be cleaned in the same way as wicker furniture. Polyurethane, a clear lacquer, or paint may be spray applied to previously unfinished wicker or rattan. Do the underside first with two to three thin coats allowing each to dry thoroughly.

Keeping wicker and rattan furniture out of the weather will help to preserve it.

What Are You Doing About Your Child's Financial Education?

What do your children learn from you about money management? Take the time to talk with them this summer about why you make certain choices, even about how hard choices can be. Include them in family discussions about spending and saving plans. Keep in mind that actions speak louder than words — your example may be their strongest learning experience about money management.

As children head back to school in September, one subject that may NOT appear on their course schedule is personal finance. Yet money management skill has a huge impact on the quality of our lives, and there is abundant evidence that the typical young adult is sorely lacking in basic knowledge, skill and experience.

While some schools ensure that all students are exposed to some basic money management information and skills, parents must take responsibility for giving their children opportunities to learn and practice money management skills. One of the best ways to learn those skills is through experience, and a great way to get experience is to have an allowance with which to practice.

Most school-age children are able to handle an allowance. The amount of the allowance, and the needs that it is intended to cover, are determined by each family and typically increase as the child grows older. In some families, by the time children reach their teens they are entrusted with significant amounts of money and the accompanying responsibility to meet all their personal clothing, hobby and social needs.

What makes an allowance a great learning tool?

- It is predictable. When a child has predictable income, then he/she can make plans. Planning, and then following those plans, are key financial management skills.
- The child will learn to prioritize — decide what is most important to him/her — another essential skill.
- Many children will learn to be very creative in how they meet their needs, so that they can get as much as possible from their money.

Trim a child's demand for video rentals, trips to the fast food restaurant, gadgets, and other things by giving him/her an allowance. It is a good lesson in money management. Research states wise use of an allowance saves on the family budget.

When considering an allowance, be realistic. The amount is based on the family resources.

Keep track of what the children spend each week. The idea is for the children to learn to budget their resources. If the allowance runs out before the end of the week, don't come to the rescue. When parents continually bail out their children, the children don't develop responsible money management skills. However, just as most employees receive salary increases, the amount of the allowance can be visited annually.

Not only parents, but also grandparents, aunts and uncles and others who are involved in children's lives have the capacity to help them build skills for success in managing money.

Parents and others can work with children in learning good money management by checking the following Penn State Website: pa4h.cas.psu.edu/Cloverbuds/docs/SmartW-MoneyBW.pdf.

The simple activities teach children to understand the importance of good money management, the importance of saving and the importance of how to make wise consumer choices.

Lycoming County Conducts Dairy Princess Coronation In Mall

MUNCY (Lycoming Co.) — The 2002 Lycoming County Dairy Princess Coronation took place recently at center court, Lycoming Mall, Muncy. To start off the day's activities, the reigning princess made pudding for the shoppers and handed out goodies to the spectators. At 3 p.m., 13 young ladies topped a giant sundae with whip cream, chocolate syrup, and cherries.

The pageant began at 7:30 p.m. with Vicky Lewis as mistress of ceremonies, who introduced Jessica Steppe; princess contestant.

Jessica is the 17-year-old daughter of James and Deborah Steppe of Williamsport. Jessica has four brothers and four sisters. In the fall she will be entering the 12th grade at Jersey Shore Senior High School. She works part time on her family farm, Pleasant Hills Hay and Dairy Farms, where they milk 60 Holsteins and maintain 230 acres of crops. In Jessica's free time she is the statistician for the boys' track team and helps out at her local church.

Donnica Greider, reigning 2001 Lycoming County dairy princess crowned the new 2002 maids and misses after each gave a short speech about herself. The two misses are Ashley Derr, the 10-year-old daughter of Wanda and Earnest Derr of Linden, and Sherilyn Lovell, the 9-year-old daughter of Scott and Rhonda Lovell of Linden.

The 10 maids are Allyson Entz, 13-year-old daughter of Robert and Mary Lewis of Linden; Vanessa Greider, 16-year-old daughter of Jeffrey and Donna Greider, Linden; Colleen Lovell, 12 years old, and Kellyn Lovell, 14 years old, both daughters of Scott and Rhonda Lovell, Linden; Darsy McClain is the 13-year-old daughter of Scott and Diane McClain of Cogan Station; Laura Shutts, 14 years old, and Sarah Shutts, 16 years old, both daughters of David and Becky Shutts.

Pictured from left, Sara Dursten, Tioga County princess; Jessica Steppe, 2002 princess; and Sara Jennings, Pennsylvania's alternate dairy princess.

Regina Steppe is the 15-year-old daughter of James and Deborah Steppe of Williamsport. Rebecca Ulmer is the 15-year-old daughter of Daniel and Susan Ulmer of Jersey Shore; and Sara Ulrich, the 15-year-old daughter of Charles and Suzette Ulrich of Allenwood.

Jessica was required to give her informational speech titled "A Day In The Life Of My Dad." The speech entailed what her father and brothers do on a daily basis to produce for the consumer. She mentioned how milk contains calcium and helps prevent osteoporosis.

Steppe was then answered an impromptu question: "What is so important about first impressions?" She replied, "First impressions can and cannot be good, it depends where you are. To be liked you must be yourself, and not something you aren't."

The evening culminated as Donnica Greider, 2001 Lycoming County dairy princess, teared up giving her farewell, mentioning all the fun times throughout her reign. Donnica then crowned Jessica Steppe, the new 2002 Lycoming County dairy princess.

If interested in having the royalty do a promotion, call Wanda Derr at 323-4949 to book your date.

Here are instructions for a group activity that results in a dairy delicious product.

Save Time In The Kitchen

If you are looking for ways to save time in the kitchen that don't spoil the results, here are a few preparation tips that really work.

• Make a quick stock flavoring for stews by combining onion, garlic and carrots in a blender with a little bit of water.

• For oven-baked potatoes in a hurry, boil the potatoes for five minutes before putting them in the oven, or put an aluminum skewer through each potato before baking. Either process reduces baking time by 15 to 20 minutes.

• To cook dense vegetables (potatoes, carrots, and squash) quickly without losing flavor or nutrients, cut ½ pound into ¼-inch matchsticks and place in microwavable bowl or pan. Add two tablespoons water, cover and microwave in "High" for five to seven minutes, stirring just once.

• Shave off 10 to 15 minutes of meal preparation by using boned chicken breast halves.

• Use your freezer and microwave oven to keep cooked pasta and rice readily available. Place ½ cup portions in 6-ounce custard cups, cover with clear plastic wrap and freeze. When firm, remove portions from cups, transfer to freezer for storage until needed. To reheat, place portions as needed back into custard cups and microwave on "High" for 1½ to 2 minutes. Do not add water.

Huntingdon County Fair Seeks Fair Queen Contestants

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — Many years ago, the Huntingdon County Fairgrounds was home to the "Miss Huntingdon County" contest. As many as 50 young ladies competed for this title each year.

This year, the tradition is being brought back with the Huntingdon County fair queen contest. Contest organizers are seeking candidates.

The fair queen contest will be conducted on Thursday, Aug. 15 in the grandstand at 5 p.m. The queen will receive a $250 scholarship along with an expense paid trip to Hershey to compete in the state fair queen pageant at the State Fair Convention.

The first alternate will receive a $125 scholarship and the second alternate will receive a $75 scholarship.

The queen and her alternates will be responsible for promoting the Huntingdon County Fair throughout the year at various events.

Contestants must be residents of Huntingdon County, age 16 to 20 as of June 1, single, have no children, and have parents' or guardians' consent.

The contest will consist of a personal interview with the judges, appearance in evening gown, short essay, and impromptu question.

Applications, containing biographical information and questions, should accompany the 300-word or less essay entitled, "What My Fair Means To Me" to the fair office. A wallet-size picture should also accompany the application.

Applications may be picked up at and returned to the fair office on Fairgrounds Road in Huntingdon. The deadline for applications to be received is Wednesday, July 31.

For additional information, contact the fair office at (814) 643-4452.

Egg Tips

A neat trick for making deviled eggs is to put the yolks in a plastic bag with the herbs, spices, and mayonnaise and squish until well mixed. Cut off corner of the bag and squeeze filling into the whites. Garnish with paprika.

Great eggs: Don't salt those eggs until you are ready to serve them. Salt added while cooking will make omelets and scrambled eggs tough. Pepper and other seasonings may be added at any time and won't affect the texture of your dish.

Well Preserved

Cherries

Freezing or canning the cherries is a convenient method to preserve this special fruit. Remember to select freshly harvested cherries with deep uniform color and ideal maturity for eating fresh. Preserve them as soon after harvesting as possible. Both sweet and sour cherries can be canned or frozen and may be preserved with or without seeds.

What amount of cherries need to be bought for canning or freezing? It takes about 18 pounds to make a 7-quart canner load and 11 pounds to make 9 pints. An average of 1 ⅜ pounds makes 1 pint of frozen cherries. Variations in moisture content, size, and variety make these approximations.

How can discoloration be prevented in pitted cherries? If you pit them, immediately place the cherries in cold water containing one teaspoon powdered ascorbic acid or six 500-mg vitamin C tables per gallon to prevent stem end discoloration.

Why do whole cherries split when canned? Pressure builds up inside the skin when temperature changes occur. If preserved unpitted, prick skins on opposite sides with a clean needle to prevent splitting.

What procedures should be used to freeze cherries? Cherries may be packed with syrup or dry sugar. To make a syrup pack, mix and dissolve 2 ½ cups sugar in 4 cups of water for sour cherries; or mix 1 ¼ cups sugar in 4 cups water for sweet cherries. Add 1 cup syrup to each quart of prepared cherries. To make a dry pack, mix ⅔ cup dry sugar per quart of sour cherries or ⅓ cup sugar per quart of sweet cherries. To package, fill pint or quart freezer bags to a level 3 to 4 inches from their tops. Squeeze out air leaving 1-inch head space. Seal, label and freeze. Before freezing, bags may be inserted into reusable rigid plastic freezer containers for added protection against puncture and leakage.

Are frozen cherries suitable for making cherry pie? Yes. Defrost the cherries until they separate. Empty them into a large bowl and add the remaining pie ingredients. Remember to subtract the amount of sugar used in freezing them. The cherries should then sit until they have thawed and the sugar and thickener have formed a syrup from the defrosting cherry juices. Bright red sour cherries such as Montmorency are the traditional pie cherry.

Can cherry desserts be frozen? Making two pies when cherries are in season is a great way to enjoy one now and the other later with a minimum of work. Pies may be frozen baked or unbaked and will keep well for up to four months. Unbaked fresh pies have a better fresh-fruit flavor than frozen baked pies, but the bottom crust tends to get soggy. To freeze an unbaked pie, make it as usual except add one extra tablespoon flour or tapioca or ½ extra tablespoon cornstarch to juicy filling to prevent boiling over when pies are baking. Do not cut vents in the top crust.

Freeze in pan using a vapor proof wrapping. Fruit fillings may be thickened and cooled before adding to the crust. When you are ready to serve a frozen unbaked pie, cut vent holes in the upper crust. Put the pan on a cookie sheet and bake without thawing at 450 degrees F. for 15-20 minutes, and then reduce heat to 375 degrees F. for 20 to 30 minutes or until top crust is brown. Baked fruit pies may be made as usual, cooled rapidly, and frozen before packaging. Pies are easier to wrap after freezing. To serve a frozen baked fruit pie, let it stand at room temperature about 15 minutes, then heat it in a 350 degree F. oven until warm, about 30 minutes. Do not freeze any pie with a custard base as it will separate. Cherry pie filling can be made as usual and frozen for up to eight months. Remember to allow head space in the package for expansion. To use, thaw just enough to spread in the pie crust and bake as usual. Other desserts such as cobblers, crisps, and upside down cakes can also be frozen. There may be some color absorption into the dough over time, but this only affects the appearance of the product.

Cherries may be canned using your choice of water, apple juice, white grape juice, or more commonly sugar syrup. A medium syrup is suggested for sour cherries and a very light syrup works well with sweet cherries. To make a very light syrup for a canner load of quarts, mix 1 ¼ cups of sugar in 10 ½ cups water and heat to dissolve.

A medium syrup can be made with 3 ¾ cups sugar in 8 ¼ cups water. To hot pack cherries, put washed and drained cherries in boiling syrup, juice, or water and bring to a boil. Fill clean jars with hot cherries and cooking liquid, leaving ½ inch headspace. To raw pack cherries, fill jars with drained cherries and cover with your choice of boiling liquid, leaving ½ inch headspace. Process hot pack pints for 15 minutes and quarts for 20 minutes in a boiling water bath. Process raw packed pints or quarts in a boiling water bath for 20 minutes. Cherries may be processed in a pressure canner for 10 minutes at 6 pounds pressure for both raw or hot packed styles.

Consuming Thoughts

Unless a family is content to live on salads and cold cuts or take-out hamburgers, burritos and other "deli" items for the whole summer, there's no way to avoid the kitchen, no matter what the temperature.

It's possible to prepare nourishing hot meals without the cook and the kitchen becoming overheated.

Here are a few suggestions that will help.

• Do major cooking on the weekends, preferably in the morning or evening when the temperature is usually cooler.

• Cook on outdoor grills planning complete meals including meat or fish, vegetables and a dessert such as grilled fresh pineapple.

• Cook for several meals at one time. For example, two chickens take no more time or energy to prepare than one, and the second can be refrigerated or frozen to be served in a salad, curry or quick stir-fried Chinese dish later in the week.

• Collect a file of one-dish meal recipes. Stews, casseroles, soups that combine meat, vegetables, rice or pasta requires less energy and fewer utensils making clean up easier.

• Plan meals that can be made on top of the range rather than in the oven.

• When you do use the oven, make the most of it and bake several dishes at the same time. And always use a timer; every time the oven door is opened, heat escapes.

• Don't preheat the oven for foods that take more than one hour to cook.

• For range surface cooking use good heat-conducting metal cookware with snug-fitting lids. Foods cook faster and more evenly with heat efficient cookware. Match the size of the pan to the heating element; more heat will get to the pan and less will be lost.

• Never turn on the heat before putting the pan on the range, it wastes energy and raises the temperature.

• Use small electric skillets or slow-cookers for small meals rather than the range or oven. And take advantage of their portability by cooking in the coolest room in the house or use the appliance outdoors.

• Take a tip from the Chinese and cut foods into small pieces, which cook faster. When cooking with gas, use moderate flame settings. If a dish requires higher heat, be sure to have the flame directly under the cookware. Do not let the flames lap up around the side of the pan. If you cook with electricity, turn off the burners several minutes before the allotted cooking time. The heating element stays hot long enough to finish the food.

Drink More Water

MONTOURSVILLE (Lycoming Co.) — Water is mostly an afterthought in our diets. We need eight to 10½ eight-ounce glasses of water a day just for the basic functions of life, according to W. Larry Kenney, Ph.D., professor of physiology at PSU. Yet a normal healthy adult excretes almost six cups of water a day in urine alone. If you consider that we also lose fluid in daily activity and in hot weather, we live in a constant state of mild dehydration.

Little has been published about mild dehydration, but new research has shown that fluid consumption can decrease the risk of kidney stones and make us less likely to suffer a fatal heart attack.

According to Jacqueline Chan, Dr.P.H., "Drinking five or more glasses of water a day may be even better for the heart than alcohol or aspirin."

Here's how to tell if you're dehydrated: Dry lips and tongue, weakness, dizziness or exhaustion, nausea or headache, thirst.

If you're thirsty, you're already slightly dehydrated. Thirst is triggered only when the body has lost one percent to two percent of its body weight.

Muscle cramps, especially in the legs, have been linked to dehydration or low levels of electrolytes, which help regulate muscle contractions.

A decreased volume of urine, though not necessarily less frequent urination, is a definite indication you're running dry.

Urine that's deep yellow, tan, light brown or has a greenish tint means you're dehydrated. Urine should be clear, pale yellow, or straw colored. The lighter the color the better.

Students anticipate and react to the judges' decision.

The student team works on their winning ice cream cake entry.

At left, Kellie Phillips, Berks County Dairy Princess, spoke to the students at St. Francis Academy prior to the start of the Dairy Day contest. She encouraged them "to make milk a part of every meal."

Students Take The Cake

BALLY (Berks Co.) — Teachers and students' creativity went into overtime as they tried to fabricate an eye-appealing and still edible ice cream cake with a birthday theme for the annual Dairy Day conducted recently at St. Francis Academy, Bally.

The student's team prevailed.

But it wasn't that simple — each team member on both teams had to participate. That's 40 people, 80 hands, working on two cakes with 33 gallons of vanilla Turkey Hill ice cream and a whole lot of toppings. And it was up to each team's haggard creative director to make sure this happened without incident.

After the judges declared the winner, the masterpieces were basically destroyed so they could be distributed and consumed by all those in attendance.

The teachers' team competed against a team of students, with representatives from each grade, to create an ice cream cake with a birthday theme. They used vanilla ice cream; an 18 x 27-inch brownie, cookie crumbs, chocolate syrup, jimmies, pretzel sticks, marshmallows, licorice, cherries, and icing.

This year's contest focused on creativity with a time limit and a racing element. Contestants hustled back and forth from the ingredient area. Anyone that didn't check in with the ingredient supervisor, Fern Freed, was given a time penalty. They had a maximum of 20 minutes to create their masterpieces.

Prior to the start of the contest, the new Berks County Dairy Princess Kellie Phillips of Mertztown, gave a presentation about milk to the students. Portraying a doctor, she said: "Regardless of age, everyone needs milk."

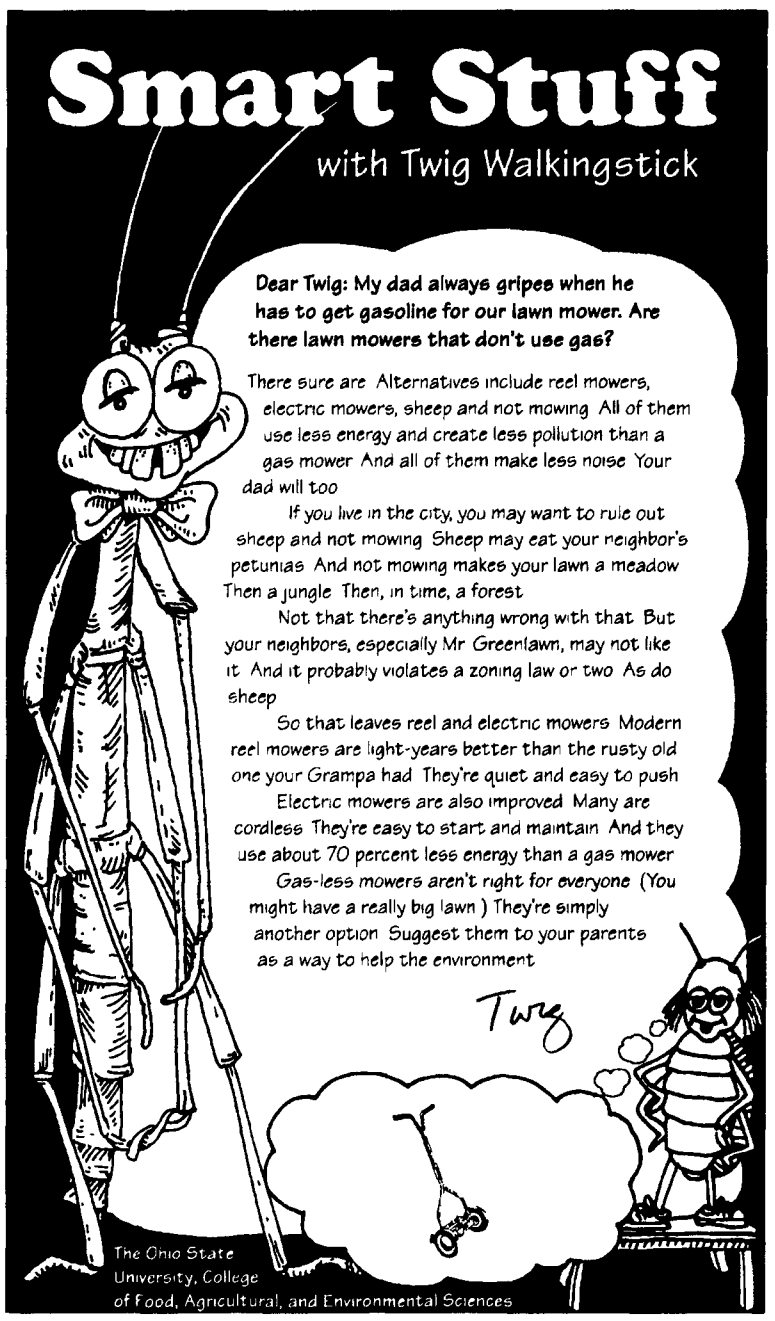
Judges for the event include Joyce Lepre, retired teacher, Berks County Dairy Princess Kelly Phillips, Robin Melcher, vice president for National Penn Bank, Denise Sobjak of Sobjak's Market, Steve Mohr of the Route 100 Deli and Bakery, Bob Hilbert of Bob Hilbert Sportswear, Jim Barnett of Land O'Lakes, and Francis Kehs of Kehs Auto.

Participating students include Andrea Markofski, Nicholas McMenamin, Mariah Hish, William Padelt, Emily Racoosin, Zachary Richards, Kimberly Day, Mike Furey, Courtney Venarchick, Vincent Sodano, Christie Edling, Danny Kriebel, Erin Brady, Matthew Mansur, Shannon DeHont, Colin Casey, Fr. Robert Quinn, Fr. Edward Essig, Fr. Robert Freed, Msgr. Edward Coyle.

Participating teachers included Anita Brady, Collette Finegan, Bonnie Coughlin, Thomas Murphy, Pat Haas, Joan Kelsch, Teresa Carver, Joan Polk, Tere Ceaserz, Margaret Gehringer, MaryBeth McMenamin, Patti Chandler, Kathy Little, Sharon Boyer, John Coble, Denise Stull, Linda Gilbert, Kim Schroeder, Zoe Derkotch and Leo Ciaciak.

Dairy Day is a celebration of the end of the school year and June as Dairy Month.

St. Francis Academy, founded in 1743, is the oldest school in the 13 original colonies and it has an enrollment of more than 280 students in grades pre-K through 8.



Smart Stuff
with Twig Walkingstick
Dear Twig: My dad always gripes when he has to get gasoline for our lawn mower. Are there lawn mowers that don't use gas?
There sure are Alternatives include reel mowers, electric mowers, sheep and not mowing All of them use less energy and create less pollution than a gas mower And all of them make less noise Your dad will too
If you live in the city, you may want to rule out sheep and not mowing Sheep may eat your neighbor's petunias And not mowing makes your lawn a meadow Then a jungle Then, in time, a forest
Not that there's anything wrong with that But your neighbors, especially Mr Greenlawn, may not like it And it probably violates a zoning law or two As do sheep
So that leaves reel and electric mowers Modern reel mowers are light-years better than the rusty old one your Grampa had They're quiet and easy to push
Electric mowers are also improved Many are cordless They're easy to start and maintain And they use about 70 percent less energy than a gas mower
Gas-less mowers aren't right for everyone (You might have a really big lawn) They're simply another option Suggest them to your parents as a way to help the environment

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Do you sometimes have one of those days when you don't know what to do first? There are too many things to keep one busy.

Even though it is dry the weeds grow up through the iris beds. The other day I pulled enough weeds to fill a wheelbarrow. I've pushed so many loads of weeds up the hill behind our house and into the woods.

Our raspberries are ripe but they are not as big as sometimes. This year they are a bit overgrown which makes them difficult to pick.

You should see our sour cherry tree. It is red with ripe fruit, and I'm climbing a ladder to get the cherries to freeze. As there was a net over the whole tree, the birds left plenty for us.

This year I've had a lot of trouble with seeds not sprouting. I planted a long row of lima beans along a fence but only a dozen or so came up. Two times I planted new flower seed and I've not seen any plants. Even the bulbs are slow coming up. I've hoed along the bean rows but not on top of them as I still have hopes they might sprout.

All of this work must be fitted around doctor's appointments. And, sometimes we wait two hours as he is "running late." More and more tests are ordered to try and find out why my husband is not recovering. It seems that when nerves are dead, then muscles do not respond. It is difficult for Allen to just sit when he would like to be outside working and helping.

Pesky Mosquitoes

MONTOURSVILLE (Lycoming Co.) — Mosquitoes lay their eggs in stagnant water around the home. Weeds, tall grass, shrubbery, and discarded tires also provide an outdoor home for adult mosquitoes. Eliminating places for mosquitoes to breed can go a long way to prevent West Nile virus.

"The chance of contracting West Nile virus from an infected mosquito is small" says Pennsylvania Surgeon General Robert Muscalus. "And even if an infected mosquito bites you, your chances of becoming seriously ill are small. Avoid bites with the fallowing cautions.

Make sure screens fit tightly over doors and windows to keep mosquitoes out of your home.

Consider wearing long-sleeved shirts, long pants and socks when outdoors.

When possible, reduce outdoor exposure at dawn and dusk during peak mosquito periods (usually April through October).

Use insect repellent according to the manufacturer's instructions.

An effective repellent contains 20-30 percent DEET.

Avoid using products that contain more than 30 percent DEET, since high concentrations may cause side effects, particularly in children. Insect repellents should not be applied to children under three years of age.

Four Wynds Farm To Host Farm-City Day In Tioga County

WELLSBORO (Tioga Co.) — The 11th Annual Farm-City Day for Tioga and Bradford counties will be conducted Saturday, July 13 at Four Wynds Farm, owned by Elwin and Charlene Fitch between Ogdensburg and Canton. This event is designed to have something for everyone while being educational and fun for all ages.

For the youngsters, there will be a pedal tractor contest which uses tractors specially designed for pulling. All youth four years of age through 12 years old are invited to participate and try this "feet" at pedaling a tractor geared to move weights on a sled behind the tractor. Also, the ever-popular "Children's Barn" will feature a variety of animals brought by 4-H youth. There will also be a hay maze for kids to walk off some of their energies.

For the adults, there will be modern as well as antique machinery displays, demonstrations involving sheep shearing, wool spinning, and horseshoeing. A veterinarian will be on hand to discuss bio security issues along with countless other exhibits and displays.

Food stands include: Ogdensburg Church of Christ Youth, hot dogs, sloppy joes, ice tea, lemonade, and coffee; the Blossburg Kiwanis, barbecue chicken halves; the Tioga County Fair Association, homemade pies; and the Bradford County Dairy Promotion Committee, milkshakes, ice cream, and milk.

One of the first things visitors will notice at the Four Wynds Farm is the breeze, even if the sun is out and the temperatures are typical of July weather. Four Wynds Farm got its name from the winds that continue to blow from all four directions. On any given day, there is a breeze blowing across the farmstead.

The original farm was purchased in 1899 by Elwin's great-grandfather and consisted of 80 acres. Elwin grew up on this very farm whereas Charlene grew up on a farm not too far away. They were married in 1976. That same year, Elwin and Charlene purchased the farm from Elwin's father, making them the fourth generation to farm here. Four Wynds Farm has been designated a Century Farm (meaning it is a farm owned consecutively for 100 years by members of the same family).

Their present farming operation consists of 259 acres. They rent an additional 300 acres from Charlene's mother, Phyllis Clegg. Their son, Bryan, is currently milking cows at the Clegg farm while helping his father with cropping here at home.

Elwin and Charlene have 85 Holsteins and 10 Jerseys in their present herd. They raise corn and oats in rotation with alfalfa and mixed hay. Corn is harvested as silage and stored in their 16-foot by 50-foot concrete stave silo. Hay is harvested as small square bales. Their feeding ration consists of silage hay plus grain purchased as mixed feed from both Rockwells and Pennfield.

Cows are milked two times each day in a 48-stanchion barn. The Fitch family raises their own dairy replacements which is one of the reasons Bryan is milking at the Clegg farm today. Elwin and Charlene had a large number of heifer calves approximately two years ago. They were then faced with the wonderful "problem" of selling off these heifers, culling their own cows to make room for the new animals at their home barn, or setting Bryan up at his grandmother's farm and allowing him to milk his "own herd."

Elwin and Charlene have their cows tested by the Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) each month. During the test, each cows' milk is sampled and weighed. The results of this testing helps Elwin make decisions regarding feed and health issues for each animal. There will be a station at Farm-City Day where you can learn more about DHIA.

Elwin and Charlene Fitch have three children and one grandson. Bryan is the youngest of their three children and their only son. He graduated in June from Canton Area High School and plans to be the fifth generation farmer to own Four Wynds Farm. Bryan enjoys collecting farm toys and will have a large model farm for you to see at Farm-City Day.

Their daughter Laura is married to Brett Taylor and currently lives in Allenwood. She served as the 1993 Tioga County dairy princess and was the 1995 Tioga County fair queen. Laura is employed by Whitedeer Run but helps her parents on the farm when needed.

Daughter Lisa is married to James Driscoll and currently lives on the next road over from the farm. She served as the 1996 Tioga County dairy princess and was the 1997 Pennsylvania alternate dairy princess. She is employed by Guthrie Clinic and helps on the farm when possible. Lisa and James are the parents of a son, Corbin Driscoll.

Elwin is kept very busy with his farm activities. All work is done by the family making this operation a true family farm. Charlene is the postmistress at the Morris Run Post Office. In their limited spare time, Elwin likes to do carpentry work while Charlene enjoys working with flowers and spoiling their grandson. She has also been a 4-H leader for 15 years and as such has been at many of the previous Farm-City Day events in the food booth.

People attending Farm-City Day at Four Wynds Farm will be helping to make history as 2002 marks the joining of Tioga and Bradford counties in their Farm-City efforts. Bradford County has previously held three events: in 1993 and 1994 at Merle and Leslie Wanck's farm in Ulster and in 1995 at Brackman's Guernsey farm near Canton. We are looking forward to this relationship as next year Bradford County hosts Farm-City Day with it returning to Tioga County in 2004.

Special activities taking place for the first time in 2002 include the "Pennsylvania Wood Mobile" — a walk-through, traveling exhibit that provides information on the state's forest resource and forest products industry. Rolling Acres Lawn Garden Equipment will be giving a demonstration on 4-wheeler safety. At the time of this publication, a cookies and milk promotion is being planned with Mrs. Fields' cookies and lots of cold, fresh milk.

Activities planned each year that have not been previously mentioned are the wagon tours, ice cream eating contest, milking demonstration, Christmas tree exhibit and T-shirt sales. Tioga County has a limited number of Farm-City T-shirts still available as souvenirs at $10 each. Proceeds from the sale of these T-shirts will help to fund this event in future years.

Farm-City Day is free and open to the public. Concession stands will sell food and souvenir T-shirts. Activities will begin at 11 a.m. with Tim McBride serving as master of ceremonies. Senator Roger Madigan will present a brief message during the opening ceremonies. Activities will conclude at 4 p.m. This event will be held rain or shine.

Directions to the farm located very close to the Tioga-Bradford-Lycoming County lines:

From Wellsboro: Take Rt. 287 south to Morris. From Morris take Route 414 east through Liberty. Follow Rt. 414 east through Ogdensburg for approximately two miles. Watch for signs taking you straight off Rt. 414 to the farm.

From Williamsport: Take Route 15 north to the Trout Run exit. Follow Rt. 14 north. Pass the Our House Restaurant. Turn left on Preston Road (first left past the restaurant). Take the second left-hand turn to the farm.

From Canton: Take Route 14 south from Canton. Pass Landon's Cedar Ledge. Take third road to right (Preston Road). Take the second left-hand turn to the farm.

High Maryland DHIA Herds For April

The April Dairy Herd Improvement information for dairy herds from the DHI processing center in Provo, Utah. The list includes herds from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. The information is listed by herd name, county association, number of cows in the herd and the average production per cow in the herd based on Energy Corrected Milk (ECM). ECM combines milk production and components.

The ECM formula is: (7.2 x lbs. protein) + (12.95 x lbs. fat) + (.327 x lbs. milk). To be included, the herd must have 10 cows averaging 65 pounds or more of ECM per cow, per day. All herds reported are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top 10 herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys, and Jerseys, and the top seven herds for Ayrshires.

Soybean Planters Need To Look For Insects

WOOSTER, Ohio — Soybean growers may be looking to get their crop in the ground, but they especially need to keep in mind two insect pests this growing season.

The soybean aphid and bean leaf beetle are problematic for soybean growers and can cause economic losses either from feeding or through the transmission of viruses.

Ohio State University Extension specialists recommend that growers scout their fields for the presence of the insects as the growing season wears on and take appropriate management actions as deemed necessary.

The soybean aphid, the first known aphid to colonize soybeans, is a relatively new insect that has, in just two years' time, spread throughout the midwest region of the country. States that reported soybean aphid populations last year included Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Indiana, Kentucky, Iowa and Wisconsin. The insect has also been reported in Virginia, West Virginia, New York and Ontario, Canada.

Researchers know very little about the soybean aphid — what exactly is its overwintering host, whether or not it's a vector for disease, and why larger insect populations tend to be found in more northern states. But what they do know is that high insect populations can cause significant yield loss to the crop.

Ron Hammond, an Ohio State Extension entomologist with the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, said some states reported an average six to eight bushel loss per acre last year due to soybean aphid feeding. "Some fields had as high as a 12 to 15 bushel loss per acre. There were reports in Ohio that indicated loss ranged from five to 10 bushels per acre. When you get into numbers like that, that's considered an economic loss;" he said.

Researchers in Ohio and other states speculate that yield losses are coming from the insect feeding, rather than from soybean mosaic virus that the insect is able to transmit.

The second insect growers should keep their eye on is the bean leaf beetle, a defoliator and pod feeder that is also a vector of bean pod mottle virus. The virus causes yield reduction in seed quality and yield, which is a problem for food-grade soybean growers who have little luck is getting a premium price for "mottled" seed. One of the main symptoms of bean pod mottle virus is green-stem syndrome, where the plant stem remains green right up to harvest and pods are malformed.

"We are getting reports now that the bean leaf beetle is emerging, which may be of a concern for those growers who have already planted their soybeans," said Hammond. "With all the rain we've been having, planting has been very spotty and in those areas with few soybean fields, they will act as trap crops and attract all the beetles in the area."

Hammond recommends that growers who already have their soybean crop in the ground to pay close attention to their fields for bean leaf beetle populations.

Collectors Perform Old Music

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) Maynard and Sara Johnson of Cincinnati, Ohio were among the participants in the first annual Old Bedford Village Colonial Crafts Fair.

Maynard Johnson plays the recorder.

While some collect antique guns, jewelry, or fine china, the Johnsons collect and perform old music.

The couple met in college and have always shared a love for music with Sara playing the hammered dulcimer and the kit fiddle as well as occasional cittern, a mandolin-like instrument. Maynard plays the cello, recorders, and tin whistles. During the 18th century, tin whistles were wooden and known as flageolets.

Maynard read that in Germany in the 18th century, the most common ensemble was a dulcimer, cello, and fiddle. The cello was used the way a bass is used today. End pins to hold the cello in.place had not as yet been invented so they held them between their knees. Maynard is making up his technique as he goes along by reading and studying old paintings.

Sara is the publisher of a series of tune collections, "The Kitchen Musician's Occasional," written for dulcimer, fiddle, mandolin and other folk instruments.

The Johnsons began playing for contra dance and square dance groups about 10 years ago. One of their friends, a caller, was an 18th century re-enactor, who was planning to be a dance master and needed musicians. Helping them to get attire and music together, he planted a seed which has grown into a giant's beanstalk.

Five years ago, they met fiddler Michael Thompson, a violin maker who has been making instruments by hand in the 18th century traditional manner. Thompson joined the Johnsons in their music reenactments and demonstrations. Like the Johnsons he enjoys researching old music and discovered the kit fiddles, the small dancing master instruments, so popular in the 18th century and began building them. His kid fiddles are sold in Colonial Williamsburg at the post office just as they were in the days when this Virginia city was the American colony capitol.

Michael also plays for a variety of dance groups doing contra dance, English country dance, and vintage dances, such as regency style ballroom dancing.

Years of playing traditional and dance music has enabled this Ohio couple to accumulate a lot of tune collections.

"We were fascinated to ding that many of the tunes, which are virtually unchanged from being played 200 years ago," said Sara who does research at the Library of Congress to acquire information and tunes. The couple also has photocopies of about 10 commonplace books from the 18th century.

"These were personal tune collections written down by people who were fiddlers and fifers in the Revolutionary era," Sara said. "They included a man who was Washington's dentist, and another who was a ship's fiddler."

"Old tunes" played on the violin are typical of the pop hits of the 1770s-1780s.

"We figure that if most of them were playing and writing down the same tunes, and those tunes were also in the music books of the era, they must be 'pop hits.' So, you could say we were playing pop hits of the '70s and '80s — the 1770s and 1780s," that is," Maynard said.

"At historic reenactments such as the 18th century event at Old Bedford Village, the Johnsons attire ranges from the 1770's to the 1800's but can squeak by as earlier period to the French and Indian War. Gradually the couple acquired attire from the later periods as they played in the Ohio River Valley, which was settled in 1788 through the War of 1812. The Johnsons participate in events leading up to the Lewis and Clark Bicentennial and Ohio's statehood in 1803.

The Johnsons participate annually at the Century Trade Fair near Springfield, Ohio, one at Dayton, and at the Mountain Craft Days in Somerset. Occasionally they travel to Valley Forge for concerts and play with a friend at one of the colonial taverns in old Williamsburg.

Sara's interest in colonial music led her to develop her own website at members.aol.com/kitchiegal/smokepage.html

Some of the research she has done led her to the famous old Revolutionary War patriotic song "Yankee Doodle." The tune has been claimed by many different countries. There's a reaper's song in Holland, a vintners's song in France, and similar tunes in Spain, Italy, and Hungary. Possibly, it reached England from Holland before the reign of Charles I. "Yankee Doodle" appeared as a nursery rhyme about Oliver Cromwell. The word "doodle" refers to a sorry trifling fellow.

Yankee Doodle was so popular that more and more verses were written until they totaled 190. There is a country dance to "Yankee Doodle." Captain George Bush recorded it in his personal notebook of fiddle tune, copied from a now lost fife tutor printed in 1776 in Philadelphia. That copy is the first evidence known for an American printing before 1794.

George Bush was a young officer in the Continental Army and left no descendents, not even our George Dubya. However, the Bush family kept his notebook until 1990 when they donated it to the Historical Society of Delaware.

Captain Bush carried his fiddle with him on his travels and in 1779 began collecting song lyrics, dance figures, and tunes in a pocket notebook.

Finding old tunes can be a fascinating hobby and many of the lyrics simply prove that "The more things change, the more they stay the same."

Michael Thompson shows a visitor how to make an 18th century violin.

This little ditty is an example:

"ON MUSICK"

Musicks a Crochet the Sober think it Vain
The Fiddles a Wooding Projection
Tunes are but flights of a whimsical brain
Which the bottle brings best to parfection
Musicians are half witted merry and madd
And those are the same that admire them
They're fools if they pley unless their well paid
And the others are blockheads to hire them!

It's 'Christmas In July' Doll Show And Sale

HAMILTON SQUARE, N.J. — The 24th annual "Christmas In July," Central Jersey's popular and unique summertime doll show and sale, returns to Hamilton Township (Mercer County) on Sunday, July 7, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Angeloni's Cedar Gardens on Route 33.

Sponsored by the Delaware Valley Doll Club of New Jersey, this event traditionally features a vast array of dolls, doll artifacts and toys. More than 55 dealers from throughout the country will be exhibiting and selling antique dolls, modern dolls, doll furniture, doll clothes, books and doll accessories.

Collectors will have over 120 tables to peruse to find that special doll for their collection. The doll show also features teddy bears as well as sampling of antiques and collectible toys.

Club President Donna Rovner, Robbinsville, believes the show's popularity may be due to the well-known doll celebrities who attend. For example, featured among this year's participants are Barbie expert and author A. Glenn Mandeville of Bordentown, N.J.; internationally known porcelain doll artist Jody Abrams of Cream Ridge, N.J.; renown antique dealer Roxanne LeMay Morison of Flourtown; and Joy Harrington of Yardley, who specializes in antiques and primitives.

Those lucky collectors who win a door prize will be pleasantly surprised at this year's numerous offerings. Lunch and snacks are available for those who plan to spend the day shopping and/or reliving their childhood through the beautiful dolls and toys they can view or add to their collection.

Admission to "Christmas In July" is $4.50 per person.

Proceeds from this annual doll show and sale benefit the Delaware Valley Doll Club's charitable activities.

Exploring Bennington Pottery Myths

Take notice at the next antique show of the many pieces of usually brown or spatter-glazed pottery labeled as "Bennington." This type of pottery is only Bennington if it was made in Bennington, Vermont during the 19th century. Otherwise, the proper name for this ware is simply American Rockingham.

Coachman bottle attributed to United States Pottery Co., Bennington, Vt. Photo credit: Skinner Galleries, Boston, Mass.

When labeled or attributed to Bennington, prices can soar over other makers of Rockingham.

Basically Bennington is yellow ware that is streaked or dappled with a lustrous manganese brown glaze; some is tortoise-shell or spattered yellow. Early Rockingham had what was called a "Flint" glaze. Later, a color-fleck glaze was used by Christopher Webber Fenton, who had inherited (through his wife) the original pottery works in Bennington from Captain John Norton, founder.

Rockingham pottery has English roots, named after the Marquis of Rockingham, who produced it at his Swinton pottery in England, in a brownish color.

When Fenton came into control of the Bennington works, it was his goal to make it the "Staffordshire of America." Staffordshire was the most popular pottery imported from England. The wares made at his United States Pottery Company in Bennington became so in demand in mid-century America that about 100 factories around the country began copying Bennington's forms and glazes. One of the first places to produce it was East Liverpool, Ohio and then in Pittsburgh and Baltimore. By the turn-of-the-century similar pieces were being made in Peoria, Illinois. However, Bennington pieces set the standard for quality.

When the United States Pottery featured pitchers, urns and figures with their variations of the flint glaze, at the Crystal Palace Exhibit in London in 1851 and in New Yorks' Crystal Palace Exhibit in 1853, they became an instant hit. Sixty other American potteries also exhibited Rockingham pieces at the exhibits.

CLUES: Pieces made at Bennington from 1845-1847 were often marked "Norton and Fenton." Other marks included "Lyman Fenton & Co., Bennington, Vt., 1849 through 1850s; the U.S.P, ribbon mark from 1852-1858. Some pieces were unmarked.

Many potteries copied the most popular Bennington pieces, such as the animal figures, coachman bottles, and toby jugs The hound-handled pitcher, made originally by United States Pottry in 1843 among them. Collectors look for the various figures with the most interesting glazes The rarest and most expensive figures are the large, molded animals. A helpful hint: it's probably a rare Bennington lion figure if the lion's front paw is raised and resting on a ball.

Hundreds of different pitcher designs, colors and shapes were made at Bennington. Yet one of the best known, "the Apostle" pitcher, tho often thought to have originated at Bennington actually was modeled by the Staffordshire master potter, Daniel Greatbach, for Henderson Pottery Works in Jersey city. Another famous pitcher, "Rebekah at the well" was modeled by Charles Coxon for Bennett and Brothers of Baltimore.

Since Bennington-type pottery was made in so many sections of the country you could well discover the often-overlooked utilitarian pieces. Not everybody appreciates brown-glazed spitoons or doorknobs. Keep your eye out for baking dishes, curtain tie-backs and even picture frames.

Don't be confused by pieces with a dull brown glaze, especially small creamers. A true Rockingham glaze makes a big difference in price. The dull brown glaze came from being dipped rather than fired.

New MF 1433V And MF 1440V Offer Big Value

ATLANTA, Ga. — Combine 4-wheel drive and an 8x8 SynchroShuttle transmission. Add Electrohydraulic PTO and hydrostatic power steering, and you have big value in a compact package with the new MF 1433V and MF 1440V tractors. Throw in an open, spacious operator platform and tilt hood for easy servicing and you have even more value for the dollar.

"These tractors lead their horsepower class in handling and operator ease," says Steve Barcuch, Massey Ferguson® general marketing manager. "They are big value tractors that fit homestead chores as well as they do landscaping and light construction situations. With their SynchroShuttle transmission, they make perfect loader tractors."

Steering is almost as important as shifting when it comes to operating a tractor under a heavy front load. Hydrostatic power steering is a standard feature on the MF 1433V and the MF 1440V. It offers a clear advantage over the power assist that is standard on many competitive compact tractors.

Operators like the open, flat, platform design. Hydraulic controls are mounted to the right of the operator's seat. Combined with the pendulum foot pedals, there is plenty of leg room and foot space for operator comfort.

Independent PTO is another standard feature on the Value tractors. The Electrohydraulic switch on the rear-mount 540 rpm PTO allows the operator to engage the PTO on-the-go. The mid-body PTO is optional.

The MF 1433V, with its 3-cylinder diesel engine, produces 33 gross engine horsepower and 27.0 PTO horsepower. The MF 1440GV produces 40.1 gross engine horsepower and 32.4 PTO horsepower from its turbo powered 3-cylinder engine.

John Deere 1565 Front Mower Is Versatile

TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — Designed with commercial cutters, municipal landscapers and estate owners in mind, the John Deere 1565 front mower delivers more durability, versatility and performance to the Company's line of front mowers.

Equipped with heavy-duty components, this mower offers an unmatched level of power, traction, maneuverability and mowing productivity for several applications, such as city parks, golf courses, schools and universities, cemeteries, airports and apartment and industrial complexes.

The John Deere 1565 front mower is powered by a 36-hp, Yanmar diesel engine that features maximum torque for tough mowing conditions. Advantages of this Carb certified engine's technology include providing a better fuel economy, quieter operation, quicker starting and lower emissions levels. Full-pressure lubrication protects the engine even with frequent operation on slopes and hillsides.

The mower's power is enhanced with a 55-amp alternator. For added productivity, the 1565 is outfitted with a 14.5-U.S. gallon fuel tank that provides enough capacity for all-day mowing.

A self-bleeding fuel system makes it possible to restart the engine even when it runs out of fuel. A rear-mounted radiator helps lower noise levels, and a large bore and stroke provides excellent torque reserve for easier operation.

In addition, the mower's dual-element air cleaner is equipped with an air restriction indicator to alert operators when servicing obstacles that might get in the operator's path.

Engineered for operator comfort and safety, the 1565 is outfitted with a deluxe, Grammer seat that adjusts to accommodate operators of different heights and weights. Armrests are standard. The mower is also equipped with power steering (two turns lock-to-lock), reducing operator fatigue and increasing machine response and maneuverability. Tilt steering allows the operator to adjust the steering wheel to a desired position and provides additional clearance for entering and exiting the operator stand. The mower's patented two-pedal foot control system eases speed and direction control for the operator. In addition, the park brake is conveniently located above the forward and reverse pedals.

For increased safety, the 1565 features Heads-up indicator lights that are located on the steering column. And the machine's two-post ROPs can be folded down for mowing under trees.

is required.

The John Deere 1565 front mower features a Kanzaki hydrostatic transmission and dual-speed transaxle with forward mowing speeds of up to 8.5 miles per hour. The mower can also achieve a transport speed of up to 15.5 miles per hour. Mechanical four-wheel drive is standard on the 1565. Operators can choose between on-demand four-wheel drive, full-time four-wheel drive or full-time two-wheel drive. In the on-demand position, four-wheel drive automatically engages when needed, providing for additional traction. It disengages when not needed, maximizing the ability for sharper turning, maneuverability and trimming.

The 1565 features a front-mounted offset mower deck that has a "Tail-Follows-The-Trail" design. An industry exclusive, this design allows for excellent maneuverability without the rear of the machine encountering obstacles and increases trimming capability and productivity.

Its high-strength steel frame offers maximum durability and allows crucial components to be located in the machine, resulting in a low center of gravity that increases stability on hillsides and slopes. And its composite hood keeps the mower free from dents, rusting and fading. Internal wet disk brakes ensure steady stops and long life, while a modulated, hydraulic clutch with brake provides smooth PTO engagement. Heavy-duty, dual hydraulic cylinders lift the deck high to clear eight-inch curbs. And a cast-iron rear bumper defends the mower from

Agway Dealer Meetings To Focus On Beating The Competition

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Agway Bagged Feeds' independent dealers operate in an increasingly competitive marketplace. To help its dealers succeed in business and beat the competition, Agway Bagged Feeds is holding a series of dealer meetings in August.

The seminars are for the more than 500 dealers in the northeast and mid-Atlantic states who carry Agway Begged Feeds. "We want our dealers to thrive. To do that, we are giving them practical business information and ideas that they can use in the day-to-day operation of their stores," said Bob Milrooney, marketing and sales manager for Agway Bagged Feeds.

Faced with increasing competition from the "big box" retailers, the dealers will hear from two speakers about successful retailing strategies. Bob Curry owns an Ace Hardware store in Quincy, Mass. that has succeeded even though a Home Depot is less than a quarter mile from his store. Dr. Kenneth Stone of Iowa State University is a leading expert on competing with "big box" retailers. He travels around the world advising small business owners on how to compete against Wal-Mart.

Dave Durr, president of Agway Feed and Nutrition, will discuss Agway's commitment to agriculture in the Northeast. He will also present the first-ever dealer awards and announce the Agway Five-Star Dealers.

In addition to these speakers, a local small business expert will present a workshop to help dealers with such issues as cash management, banking, and inventory control. Agway will also present awards to the top dealers in the region.

Three meetings are planned. They will be held in Hartford, Conn. on Aug. 13-14; Liverpool, N.Y. on Aug. 14-15; and Grantville, Pa. on Aug. 15-16.

Land Pride Offers 6-Foot Straw Crimper

SALINA, Kan. — Land Pride continues its strong position in the landscape and seeding market with the introduction of a six-foot straw crimper.

After distributing a layer of hay or straw over newly worked or seeded areas, the Land Pride Straw Crimper is then used to force straw into the ground in 6½-inch rows. The hairpinned straw holds a tight grip on the soil and keeps erosion to a minimum during high winds and water runoff.

The CR25 Series crimper is made to handle rough roadside conditions with a heavy-duty tubular frame constructed of 2½-inch by 2½-inch by 3/16-inch material. The flat, notched discs are heat-treated for durability, and feature a blunt tapered edge to hairpin the straw and not cut it. The disc hubs are greaseable, and formed from cast iron for years of dependability.

Storage stands are located on all four corners for stability and ease of hook-up to the tractor. Water tanks are optional to safely and easily add up to 600 pounds of weight to the crimper.

Proceedings Offers Perspectives On Agricultural Biotechnology Issues

ITHACA, N.Y. — Biotechnology refers to a wide variety of issues, including genetically modified foods, using animals to grow human transplant organs, cloning, genomics, and more.

Advances in agricultural biotechnology have raised serious ethical, moral, legal, and religious issues for some. For others, biotechnology represents a tremendous opportunity to improve the quality of life.

When should we say yes and when should we exercise caution in accepting, promoting, or implementing new biotechnology developments?

A new 192-page proceedings, Perspectives on Agricultural Biotechnology: Proceedings from "Biotechnology: Progress or Problem?" ($25.00 plus S&H/ sales tax; April 2002), provides an overview of agricultural biotechnology to enable expanded understanding of the issues and to foster useful dialogue among stakeholders. The proceedings is from the conference, "Biotechnology: Progress or Problem? A Conference for Developing Community Leaders," in January 2001 in Binghamton, N.Y., to explore leadership challenges related to agricultural biotechnology. Papers for 14 of the 19 conference presentations are included.

The objectives of the conference were to gain a working knowledge of biotechnology, related issues, and ethical challenges; explore communication and decision-making processes; enable participants to make personal decisions and communicate with others who hold different perspectives and values; expand leadership skills; and build networks among diverse interests in the Northeast. Some paper topics included in the proceedings are "Biotechnology: State of the Science and Review Processes"; "Alternatives to Agricultural Biotechnology"; "Agricultural Biotechnologies, the Structure of Agriculture, and the Future of the Food System"; "Consumer Information Issues Surrounding Agricultural Biotechnology"; and "Regulations and Regulators of Biotechnology."

Five appendixes to the proceedings include a conference overview, the conference program, summaries of preconference and participant surveys, lists of biotechnology-related concerns identified during small group discussions, and biographies of conference speakers.

Suzuki QuadRunner ATVs may be used by those aged 16 and older. Suzuki highly recommends that all ATV riders take a training course. We'll even pay for it. For safety and training course information, see your dealer or call the SVIA at 1-800-852-5344. ATVs can be hazardous to operate. For your safety, always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing. Always avoid paved surfaces. Never ride on public roads. Never carry passengers or engage in stunt riding. Riding and alcohol or other drugs don't mix. Avoid excessive speeds. Be extra careful on difficult terrain. Along with concerned conservationists everywhere, Suzuki urges you to "TREAD LIGHTLY" on public and private land. Preserve your future riding opportunities by showing respect for the environment, local laws and the rights of others when you ride.

For safety and training courses, information or to see your dealer or call the SVIA at 1 800 852 3344. ATVs can be hazardous to operate. For your safety always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing. Always avoid paved surfaces. Never ride on public roads. Never carry passengers or engage in stunt riding. Enertia™ PFA

SUSTAINED ENERGY FOR SUSTAINED PROFITABILITY

THE POWER OF PALM FATTY ACIDS

- One of nature's richest energy sources for dairy cattle
- Calcium salts of PFA have superior handling characteristics
- The dairy industry's most tested and reliable source of rumen bypass fat is the calcium salt of PFA

Features and Benefits

- Calcium Salt of Palm Oil Fatty Acids
  Provides a high-energy source which is highly digestible in the small intestine. This energy source does not interfere with rumen function and provides an optimum fatty acid profile.
- Consistent Quality
  Because ADM is directly involved in palm oil processing, procurement of consistent, high-quality palm oil at competitive pricing is ensured.
- Exceptional Energy Density
  The inclusion of ENERTIA[PFA] in lactation rations provides a high level of energy to support body condition, higher peak milk production, and reproductive efficiency. ENERTIA[PFA] provides 2.3 Mcal/lb NE_L.
- Excellent Handling Properties
  ENERTIA[PFA]'s flowable, granular form mixes well with feed ingredients typically used in dairy rations. Weather fluctuations (hot and cold temperature extremes) and standard feed processing procedures do not affect ENERTIA[PFA].

Feeding Recommendations

- Feed at the rate of 0.25 to 1 lb/hd/day to supplement the energy needs of high-producing dairy cows. ENERTIA[PFA].
- Although ENERTIA[PFA] is a palatable rumen inert fat source, it should be fed to cows in a diluted form and gradually introduced to cows that have not previously been fed calcium salts of palm oil fatty acids.

Cow Waterbeds . . .
Dairy Farm Proven

In the year 2000, Gordon installed one row of Waterbeds, & two row of Foam Beds.

- 2002 he expanded & installed all waterbeds because the waterbeds showed no wear, no packing, no pockets.
- Waterbeds require very little maintenance.
- Waterbeds require very little bedding.
- The waterbeds retain their shape, shedding urine & milk.
- Waterbeds will not form pockets where urine and milk can settle.
